Blue and gold. These notorious Kiski colors met us around each bend of the halls, colored every team's jerseys, and adorned the insignia of our school district since kindergarten.

It became our job as Cavaliers to make something new of them, something bold. We earned our colors' honors of distinction at academic competitions and made them our own as we performed musicals and plays.

Together, we left the halls of our high school different than when we entered them. We threw color on the previously blank walls, and we made the book you hold in your hands. We did not become part of our school softly, but loudly and with a purpose.

Let's Go Cavs...
Prior to a game at Davis Field in Vandergrift, members of the football team warm up. "We were practicing a running back drill so we were hitting his arm trying to get him to fumble the ball," Ryne Wallace (11) said. The 2017-2018 football season most likely became the final season played on Davis Field.

on stage, and do it

Story by: A. Koontz (12)

Actors, singers, dancers share a sacred place

The lights dimmed in the auditorium as a medley of The Little Mermaid songs prepared a sold-out audience for the spring musical. Anticipation peaked just as an explosion of light and sound brought Ariel to the surface and Scuttle down from the clouds.

The production sold out all four performances during the presale, only the second show to do so in school history. Mermaids, angelfish, and little crabs alike all graced the stage to convey a story that had kids on the edge of their seats as their parents watched in awe. Hours upon hours of rehearsals represented only the tip of what the musical meant to the record size cast.

The actor behind Prince Eric, Jack Petrarca (10), said, "Performing means the world to me. To know that I'm doing what I love and showing my family the product of all my hard work is just a magical experience. If I could tell someone that has always wanted to get on stage, but is too scared, I would tell them how performing isn't about other people judging you or trying to impress someone. Performing is about having fun and enjoying what you're doing. When you get up on the stage and do your very best with confidence and composure, no person will ever disrespect or judge you in any way."

The curtain closed on every production, but the stage gave every participant so much more than just a platform to deliver lines.

Positooovity...

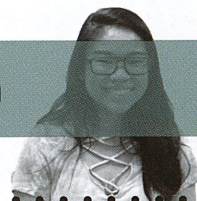

In an attempt to teach her character Ariel positivity, Rebecca Minda finds herself in a swarm of seagulls. "The show really is a childhood dream come true, and it is even more special to share it with the incredible cast, as well as our beloved director Mrs. Hampshire." The Little Mermaid was Mrs. Hampshire's last show and the whole group wanted to put on the best show they possibly could.

Band members join student section

"Echoes in Time," performed by the school's marching band strove to entertain at every home football game. The showing took place during halftime of each Friday night at Davis Field. In years past, the band wore their required blue and black uniforms adorned with mirrored accents, never participating in the student section theme of that particular week.

However, during the 2017 football season, the marching band directors allowed the musicians and color guard to dress up in each theme for the first time in decades.

Zoe Sluka (12) said, "Red White and Blue is always such an exciting night for everyone in the band. Everyone at the field is patriotic and has a great time. My friends and I hung out before the game, painted our faces, and got dressed together."

Jenna Schindler (12) said, "Every game, we were stuck in the same routine, and no one viewed us as part of the student section. We got to dress up for the blackout, and we wore our show shirts and jeans, which made us all feel proud and important."

Senior Angela Plazio (12) grinned from ear-to-ear as she looked on from the sidelines. The theme of the week left Plazio and her fellow cheerleaders donning red, white, and blue face paint and leis to participate in the school spirit of the student section. The patriotic theme of the September 8th game boasted American pride in honor of the events of September 11, 2001. Painted faces and colorful accessories became a trademark of each home football game.

Everybody Pose...

During halftime at the home football game against Latrobe, Logan Pollick (12) poses for a selfie. "I took a group selfie every home football game. It's cool to look back and see them from each week," Pollick said. Pollick served as one of the student section leaders for the football games.

C-A-V-S...

Held up by her feet, Kai Clayton (12) strongly holds her pose in front of the entire school at the homecoming assembly. Clayton said, "Pep rallies are more nerve wracking than sport games because everyone in the school is watching you, but the nerves usually help us perform better." Kai Clayton performed in the homecoming court group dance as well.

Explode, Ignite...

As the game comes to an end, a spirit leader sets off a confetti cannon, sending a colorful rain plummeting over the student section. "I love standing in the front row during football games," Kylie Zaffina said (12). "There is always so much energy in the front, and we are able to be more involved." The seniors traditionally get the front of the student section every year.

Flying High...

After scoring a touchdown, the student section celebrates by crowd surfing. Corrine Craig (12). "I felt like I was flying, but at one point, I hit a weak spot and almost fell. Thankfully, they returned me safely to the front," Craig said. Along with crowd surfing, fans celebrated touchdowns by lightly tossing senior girls in the air for each point.

I Can't Hear You...

In an effort to excite the student section, Frank Poydence (12), plays a rather unusual instrument. Poydence said, "It called a Didgeridoo. You blow into it, and it sounds similar to a tuba." Frank Poydence bought the unique instrument in hopes of starting a band.

"The best thing about Friday nights

Furry Friend...

With looks of terror on their faces, the cast and Noah Woodward (12) scream in agony when they see a man has been murdered. "I will never forget when we found a mouse in the couch; it had the same effect as this scene," Woodward said. Everyone in the room ran away in fear.

CAST KILLS it on stage

Fall play cast gasps in response

Story by: R. Newton (12)

Last fall, something puzzling hit the stage. The murder mystery written by Agatha Christie titled A Murder is Announced graced the auditorium stage.

The setting involves a quaint English home in the middle of Little Paddocks, England. Published in the town newspaper, the time and place of a murder sent the cast's characters into a frenzy to find the killer.

Even when those brave souls auditioned for their parts, the ending remained kept under lock and key. The first full read-through led to a chorus of gasps within the room.

"As we read, I kept thinking Miss Marple had to be the murderer, but by the time the killer was really revealed, my mind was blown," Jacob Myers (12) said.

Thick foreign accents added another challenge that the small cast of 12 faced, while also battling the surprise twist at the end.

"I had to learn a Hungarian accent along with Hungarian gibberish, and I found myself speaking like it all the time," Ava Caron (10) said.

From the cold foggy corners of London to the large plains that line Hungary, the actors learned to master their new skills on and off the stage.

What Did You Say?

Discussing the events, Hailey Pierce (11) speaks with Shelby Glentzer (11). "We had such a hard time memorizing our lines for this scene," Pierce said. The intricate words and complex names made saying the lines perfectly a challenge.

Oh No...

In shock, the cast discusses the events surrounding the murder. Becky Minda (12) said, "I really love being a part of the fall drama every year. I just really love being on stage." Minda also played Ariel in last year's spring musical.

Deep In Thought...

Deep in thought, Logan DeAngelis (11) tries to solve the murder mystery. "It's so satisfying to know that you remembered all your lines, even though it's easier than memorizing schoolwork," DeAngelis said. He played the role of Inspector Craddock.

BOLD MOMENTS THAT MATTER

The death of a character on stage shocked the audience, as expected. Jacob Myers (12) appeared on stage for just a few short scenes, but left a lasting impact on the production. The character he portrayed opened the plot for the murder-mystery that baffled the audience seated in the auditorium over the three nights of performances.

Students realize their high school days are dwindling

Story by: H. Gordish (11)

"College used to seem so far away, but it got real...

when the number of school days dropped below 100," Angela Koontz said.

Four years of high school. Three principals. Two upperclassman years. One year to get it right. School passed by faster as the years went on. At some point, everyone had wished to leave high school.

For juniors and seniors, more thoughts went into what came after senior year. The realization of the future felt surreal. The reality of leaving the place that they had grown so close to over the many days of high school finally hit: the actuality of moving on to something more, something unknown.

Each day, students complained about wanting to leave, the seemingly neverending amounts homework, and waking up everyday at the crack of dawn. Eventually, the students had come to a realization that these days would not last.

At some point, the fact that they would have to leave their school, their classmates, and all of the places that created their memories behind to jump into a brand new world of college or the work force hit with an unprecedented force. The regret of wishing away high school finally set in.

Senior pictures have become a milestone to most high school students. Most students choose to capture a glimpse of their senior selves in a way that represents them in the best way possible. Maddie Sulava (12) did just that...with a unique twist. When asked why she chose to do her senior shoot donning an American flag, she said, "I grew up in a very patriotic family. Taking my senior pictures with the flag was my way to express my gratitude and love for America and those who defend it." Patriotism runs through the veins of many, but shows itself in the senior pictures of few.

Foods find their way into classroom

After four or five years of Spanish, the Spanish IV and AP Spanish class students earned the privilege of cooking homemade quesadillas during class fiestas. Every Spanish class's favorite part of the year typically fell on "Fiesta Fridays." In Mexico and Spain, food dominates the culture. The school's Spanish classes, titled "Language and Culture," allowed students to immerse themselves into authentic Spanish-speaking life.

Kelly Linsensbiger (12) said, "We all pitch in when we have fiestas. Most of the time we also decorate and play Spanish music and even dance around. Some people buy food from the culture aisle at the store, and others even make authentic food at home."

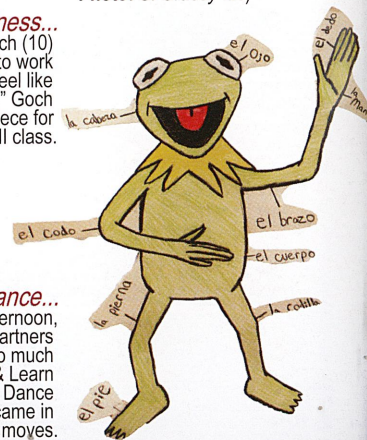

Students in their third year of Spanish also created tasty treats as part of a class assignment. Class members each chose a food dish to make in class.

Carrie Blanck (12) said, "I remember my food project. Everyone was very nervous because we were only sophomores. It ended up being fun, and at the end of every class we all got to sample about five different food dishes."

Cha-ching, cha-ching! The sounds of registers ding as young laborers return home with their first of many paychecks, beaming with excitement like their younger selves on Christmas morning.

As these former children grew into adults, much of life changed in the light of something new. The perception of "toys" changed from action figures and dolls to fancy clothes, honking cars, and technological wonders of the computer world. With this abrupt new change came price tags and the growing want for the newest "toy," fresh off the assembly line.

With the age of expensive gadgets and even more expensive college tuition, a job at a young age opened the gateway to the technological jungle gym of fancy iPhones and automobiles.

"I work as a teenager so that I can afford my own car and help pay for my college tuition," Zoe Sluka (12) said.

While some people work for large chains, others had more exotic jobs.

"I work the Pittsburgh Steelers games painting faces for people. It's nice because not only do I get paid, but I get a free ticket to the Steelers games," Taylor Williams (10) said.

In the age of heavy schedules and extracurricular activities, one student found it difficult to make the time to have a job.

"I don't have a job right now because I value my free time over money, at the moment. I have trouble balancing my extracurricular activities and my classes as is, let alone adding a job on top of that," Alexis Shaffer (12) said.

Story by: W. Walker (12)

"Music allows me to express myself in ways that words cannot."

Sports. Music. Polar opposites, antonyms, dissimilar, incompatible, different. Very rarely has anyone believed these two things could ever relate. They're both the backbone to strong personalities, but the question remains: What makes these activities so enticing to today's youth?

Success in sports requires strength, agility, and most of all, teamwork.

"Sports give you courage when things get tough and give you the ability to get up when you go down," Jared Custer (11) said.

To succeed at music required focus, listening skills, and most of all, dedication.

"Music allows me to express myself in ways that words cannot. It is something unique only to you that no one can take away," Zach Roden (9) said.

Recent research shows that playing sports and music boosts test scores and increases productivity in the classroom.

The focus and concentration derived from the activities followed back to the classroom, where the looming threat of ineligibility became a driving force for students to work harder in school to participate in the activities they loved.

Artists express individuality through their work

put me in a box

Conformity: no one took more insult of the word than the artists, actors, and the outgoing. This word has become known for stripping countless people of their individuality in favor of common societal views and the status quo. While most people followed these trends, the artisans stood defiantly in the face of conformity and expressed their own individual voices.

Some chose to become different and defy the curses of the status quo with their extravagant personalities. These people and their bright personalities added a splash of color to a grayscale world.

"I'm outgoing because there are people who are miserable all the time, and I just try to lift them up," Chris Dongiovanni (11) said.

Others became expressive through their great works of art.

"Art allows me to show how I comprehend the world in my own eyes. My art is my defiance but also my vision," Leta Meyer (12) said.

Art has become an outlet for the ongoing defiance of the dangers of conformity. Some may rise, others may fall, and thus the "art" of conformity becomes sculpted throughout a multitude of generations.

When watching seemingly every teen movie ever made, Homecoming shined as one of the most important parts of the complete high school experience.

Young couples danced and professed their love, singles hollered when Beyonce came on, and groups of teenagers caused a ruckus. Then afterward, they headed out to one of their friends' house and partied throughout the night and well into the morning.

"After Homecoming, I went to an under 21 club with my buddies," Ethan Newell (10) said.

However, for most kids, their post-homecoming plans differed very much from this narrative. For example, some spent the night adventuring with their friends.

Homecoming Queen Rebecca Minda (12) said, "I went bowling with Jack and Lucas, and then we went to Sheetz. Then, my car battery died, and we had to stand outside in the cold waiting for a jump."

Although the night certainly had some plot twists, the ceremony that commenced on Davis Field progressed out of Vandergrift and well into the night. Whether sharing the festivities with friends or family at a bowling alley, house, or club, each found a way to personalize and celebrate the event.

Bust A Move...

Dancing the night away, Garrison Wehrle (9) gets down in the center of the second dance circle to a lesser known song. Wehrle said, "My freshman year, Homecoming was actually more fun than I expected." A rapper from the nineties no one had heard of blasted through the speakers in Gym B.

Dance All Night...

Smiling from ear to ear, Kami Kay Kirschbaum (12) exhibits her grooviest dance move to the beat of the blaring music that fills the gym. Kirschbaum said, "I wore fancy pants and styled it with a white blouse. My inspiration behind my outfit was some African/Malagasy jewelry and textiles from my travels." Very interested in fashion, Kirschbaum modeled for a couple of different boutiques in Pittsburgh.

Strike A Pose...

Perched in front of the student section, Josh Madzy (12), Logan Pollick (12), Jake Stariha (12), and Shane Ross (12) sport their fanciest attire after escorting the girls on court. "It was overall such an electric night and I would not have wanted to spend it with any other group of people," said Stariha. He escorted Homecoming court nominee, Alexis Moyer (12).

BOLD MOMENTS THAT MATTER

Music pulsed through the secondary gym in the fall of 2017 as Homecoming raged on. One student dared to step outside the box and circle to display his own unique dance moves. Tie flailing about, Wyatt Morey (12) dropped down to all fours to breakdance along the outskirts of the evening's festivities.

Adjusting her corsage, Olivia Chepkevich (12) enjoys the sunset over the lake at Northmoreland Park. She took photos with her friends prior to the Homecoming Dance.

Smiling at a teammate, Corinne Davis (11) prepares to begin another cheer. Davis prepared for the night by dotting her face in paint and placed her bow atop her head.

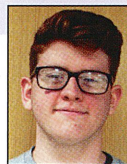

Donning the Cavalier mascot costume, Chris Dongiovanni (11) raises his fist in character. He filled the mascot position for the duration of the football season.

Preparing for the next song, Colin Sames (12) sports his sousaphone during the Homecoming Game. Colin has played in the band all four years of high school.

Cellphones become part of every student's daily routine

Story by: W. Walker (12)

...app-solutely!

"Okay, I don't want the iPhone X. I NEED it. How am I supposed to wait an entire month?"

Blink! In a flash, a cell phone came to life, buzzing with news updates and games to play. Phones became so entangled in everyday life that a day without the tiny box became painstakingly difficult.

The cell phone evolved in such a short time, and managed to permanently worm its way into the school day. In just one decade, phones transformed from just a simple device to call people into a mini computer with mega abilities.

Many believed that cell phones became a bother and a distraction to the school day and the learning process. "I only got my first iPhone about three months ago. I was fine without it, but I still don't feel the need to have it constantly glued to my hand," Jocelyn Bentley (10) said.

Portrayed by some as nuisances, others felt it necessary to have all of the gadgets at the ready. "When I have a lot to do during Lunch and Learn, my phone allows me to communicate with people and gives me quick access to the Internet so I can study when the wifi goes down," Nduge Mulwa (12) said.

No matter your stance, cell phones became an integral part of society, and with this came the need to adapt to these technologies.

Tapping away on his phone, Tyler Fitzpatrick (10) checks his notifications. Cell phones helped to pass the time during long periods.

Students prepare to enter an unprecedented world

Time passed in recognizable forms in markers easy for us to understand. Months turned into years that melted into decades, but what about the moments that change history? What about the seconds that happened in the blink of an eye that held the power to change what historians wrote in the history books?

This past calendar year forever carried the weight of Hurricane Irma, the Las Vegas massacre, the Parkland school shooting, and so many other countless events that left the world a different place when the sun set those evenings.

Initial outcries of disgust followed by support for the victims became a norm. We logged onto Twitter, unfazed each time another hashtag begged for a retweet, proclaiming support for another tragedy. We as a generation learned what it meant to stay home from school not because of a major weather event, but because a student made a bomb threat on a bathroom wall.

Many days appeared dim as one sobering fact after another emerged, but we have something no generation before us truly did: we have the power as we prepare to enter the world to decide absolutely everything.

At a time of partisan issues, gun control debates, and talks of the government de-funding programs like Planned Parenthood loomed in the news, we gained a responsibility we did not necessarily ask for.

The number of days until winter or summer break proved the only real kind of time we ever concerned ourselves with as students up until this point. We learned of wars that happened decades, or maybe even hundreds of years ago, our only real connection maybe a distant relative that died long before any of us ever lived.

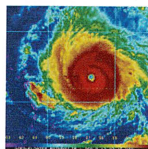

Now, in 2018, we witnessed history happen in real time. The marches on the Capitol, the presidential race of 2016, and events like the Hawaiian nuclear scare happened to us, but one day they'll grace the pages of the books the next generation reads in their Modern World History class. Our teachers told us where they were on 9/11, but our peers that go on to teach will tell their students what it felt like to crouch in the back of biology labs when we practiced active shooter drills after another school massacre.

Going forward, our job becomes to sift through click-bait lies and to slow down the 24-hour news cycle to make as informed decisions as possible about the future of our country and world. We've witnessed incredible times for nearly our entire lives. The next step is left up to us, but as long as we remember our ultimate goal of leaving the world a better place than when we discovered it, we have the power to conquer anything that may come our way.

A month after the Parkland, Florida school shooting at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School, school administrators and students joined to discuss school safety. "I feel like students needed to be in the loop of our school safety policies so the meeting was super important. It makes me so happy that so many people actually showed up. It went smoother than I was anticipating," Carmen Pastor (12) said. Members of local law enforcement, school board members, guidance counselors, principals, and members of central office all sat on stage to take questions alongside student representatives.

Hunker Down...

At precisely 8:12 AM on February 20, students in Mr. Fantaski's fifth period ACM hunker down for a districtwide school safety drill. Mr. Fantaski said, "It was interesting fitting 17 students into one corner of my room, one of the smallest in the school." In response to the Parkland tragedy, district officials simulated an active shooter in their buildings.

Raising her pom high above her head, Olivia Chepkevich (12) hypes the pep assembly crowd. "Being a cheerleader meant representing my school in a positive way and bringing spirit to all of the sporting events. As well as having the best time alongside some of my best friends," Chepkevich said.

Stand Together...

Joining hands around the flag pole at the front entrance of the school, members of Bible Club and other students joined in prayer. "I think it was an incredible opportunity for people who don't usually pray on a daily basis to be involved," Julianna Firek (12) said. Students arrived at the high school 20 minutes early for the service.

Taking A Bow.

In the final bow of the last production of The Little Mermaid, the cast takes in the roar of applause from the audience. Sophie McDermott (12) said, "The standing ovation felt never-ending! I will never forget the overwhelming feeling of fulfillment, and I am so thankful that I was able to be a part of such an iconic show." Since it was former choir teacher Mrs. Hampshire's final show, the musical became one of the most extravagant ever.

Story by: R. Newton (12)

The line "Up where they walked and up where they ran" didn't prove an issue with last spring's musical cast as some of their characters took an unexpected trip to the sky. Cast members that played Ariel and Prince Eric had a special demand placed upon them, in the form of guide wires that aided them in flying across the stage in the production of The Little Mermaid.

Between the climactic drowning of Prince Eric and the skillful swimming of Ariel, Director Bob Capanna (fac) didn't let this mesmerizing effect go to waste. The experience proved a culture shock for the actors.

Special effects called for an early Saturday morning choreography session a few days before opening night.

"At first I was groggy and unenthusiastic that I had to come in on a Saturday morning, but the feeling of flipping in the air is something that I don't think I'll ever forget," Jack Petrarca (10) said.

Rebecca Minda's (12) experience was a similar one.

"Flying was both really scary and super fun, even though I threw up after the first choreography rehearsal from spinning around in the air over and over again," Minda said.

Blending It Out...

Using purples, pinks, and reds, Olivia Chepkovich (12) applies a full face of stage makeup to a cast member. "I used a Morphe eyeshadow palette and a variety of colors to achieve the desired colors to match their costumes. I also used fishnet tights to create a 'scaly' effect," Chepkovich said. She had done makeup for the past two musicals.

Kneeling Down...

In one of the more dramatic scenes, Noah Woodward's (12) character stumbles upon Jack Petrarca's (10) character. Woodward said, "I have never talked in a British accent before so it took a lot of practice to nail it. It took awhile, but something magically clicked by showtime and I was finally Grimsby." Woodward most recently played Patrick Simmons in the fall drama, A Murder Is Announced.

Princesses A Plenty...

Putting on her cheesiest smile, Brittany Rupert (11) transforms her character into an obnoxious princess. Rupert said, "The scene was hilarious as a whole, but my favorite part was singing terribly in hopes of getting Prince Eric to fall in love with us." Brittany Rupert danced in the show, as well, and could be found teaching dance to children at the YMCA.

"I was the bass. I wore a long purple dress with blue, glittery gills and a blue fin. We also colored cupcake liners and used them as fins on my face." Brittney Drobka (12)

"I was a sea urchin. I wore a blue leotard, blue tights, and long sparkly gloves. My favorite parts of the costume were the blue and purple strings that decorated the leotard." Georgia Schafer (12)

What was it like working with the little crabs?

"My younger brother was a little crab so it warmed my heart to be able to share that special moment on stage with him."

Shelby Glentzer (11)

Student writers navigate the world of high school English

Art; the very word contained a vast arsenal of tools that emphasized human individuality. An art form that embodied the artistic spirit with individual ingenuity: writing. The quest to understand and master this art form remained long and tedious, with most not reaching success yet.

To understand any skill, we started from the beginning and eventually worked our way up to mastery. Since the earliest days of elementary school, the "five paragraph formula," the scourge of advanced writing, has become drilled into the heads of youth. To truly leave your signature mark, one had to break from the habits of the past and evolve.

The largest shift away from this occurred in the A.P. Language and Composition classes, one of the newer classes. This marked the first shift toward individuality in students as the demand for higher writing trumped the habits of an outdated system.

"The transition was harder because I still feel like I need to write the old way. What we do in A.P. Lang. is more creative than anything we could do with the five paragraph essay," Sara Lyons (11) said.

Another noticeable shift occurred with the seniors, as the shift from contemporary A.P. Lang. and Comp. to old-fashioned A.P. Literature impacted them greatly.

"It's like two completely different worlds. It feels like almost everything I learned in A.P. Lang. isn't as applicable as I thought for A.P. Lit.," Maggie Mullooly (12) said.

Writing remains one of the most diverse styles of art. Your own personal signature signs your legacy into the permanent confines of history.

eclipse of the sun

Students detail rare sighting

As the sun rose on a calm August Monday, the moon raced it to the top. For the first time in decades, a total solar eclipse passed through the entirety of the United States, and created a line of darkness from Oregon to South Carolina. Thousands of spectators flocked to this path of totality to get the best views.

While solar eclipses are quite common, happening once every eighteen months, in specific locations they are once-in-a-lifetime. Tourists and scientists alike scrambled to the path of totality and donned the NASA authorized safety glasses.

Some students found themselves right along the path of totality, where the sun was perfectly blocked by the moon.

"I was in Myrtle Beach for the solar eclipse and got a beautiful view of it. All the lights in the condo were on in the day time as if it was night," Taylor Fairman (12) said.

While not everyone in the district was able to travel, the people who remained home took to the Internet and made the most out of their experience.

"I got on my personal laptop and tracked the eclipse by going live on Facebook for about a half an hour and was posting updates as the eclipse happened," Andrew Waugaman (10) said. "I also viewed the eclipse through a welder's helmet. It was a very unique experience, even though the sun wasn't fully covered by the moon here."

The next total eclipse in the United States will occur in 2024 and will pass through the very tip of Pennsylvania. Even with the next eclipse being just over the horizon, the memories made by students and faculty of the 2017 eclipse will last a lifetime.

Some students traveled outside of the Alle-Kiski Valley during the time of the total eclipse.

Micary Wehrle (11), her brother, and her father traveled to Sweetwater, Tennessee when the events took place. After a long roadtrip the day prior, Wehrle and her family paid to park in a field just off the main highway along with hundreds of others. She noted that, surprisingly, the temperature felt like it dropped 15 degrees during totality.

Major Practice...

Helping the band prepare for their show, Echoes in Time, drum major Carmen Pastor (12) runs through another drill. "My aunt was a drum major too, so I'm really happy to follow in her footsteps," Pastor said. Carmen Pastor has also played the flute for eight years, and has performed with Kiski's Symphonic Band.

On The Horizon...

As the sun set on the horizon, Tyler McCandless (9) took a shot of the ocean and sky. "It was nice to escape the cold weather of PA to visit my grandparents over Thanksgiving," McCandless said. McCandless witnessed the sunset in Fort Pierce, Florida.

pause and reflect

Summer days faded quickly as the new fall term began. Afternoons filled with adventures and friends morphed into fourth period calculus, leaving those warm memories as just that... memories.

"Last summer, we were in Ocean City, and we went parasailing. I remember our mom made us take a GoPro up with us and record it, but I was so scared to be that high up that the only thing you could hear is me screaming the entire time. It's an interesting way to relive the memory whenever I watch it," Shilo Ross (11) said.

Years passed silently. Freshman learning experiences melted into sophomore middle child syndrome.

Junior self realizations gave way to the undeniable crash landing of senior year. Impending graduation caps and senior projects forced the realization that many of us would fight our way past the library during a class change for the final time.

"It sounds cliché, but high school really has flown by in the blink of an eye. I remember everything so vividly, but at the same time, everything morphs together in my memories. I think junior year was definitely the hardest, and senior year is manageable as long as you get your college applications sent in before the end of the first nine weeks. The most important thing I can take away from high school is that I've learned not to care what people think of me. I don't let anyone treat me badly anymore," Aubry Chickerella (12) said.

The slamming of lockers and stampede to the buses will fade from our minds over time, but laughing fits shared under the lower cafeteria's red glow and victories taken on the new turf soccer fields behind the middle school root themselves deep into our memory as we reflect on our time as Cavaliers.

Seniors discuss their last firsts

For the class of 2018, the beginning of the end seemed to sneak up on its unsuspecting students. As the year progressed, many began to experience their last firsts. From their last opening night to their last home game, each member of the graduating class had a moment when their soon-to-be future truly had become real.

"My last chorus concert is going to be really heartbreaking, especially because we actually get to sing the third verse this year," Madison Sieczkowski (12) said.

Keaton Moorhead (12) reflected on his last season playing high school soccer.

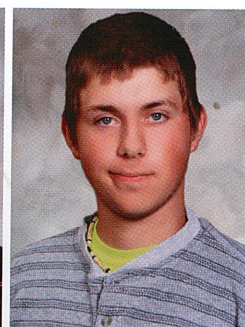

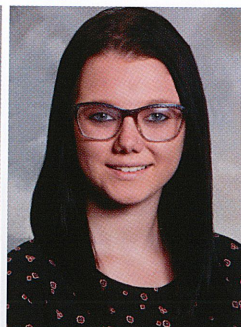

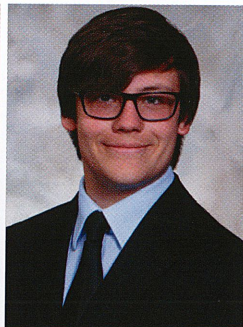

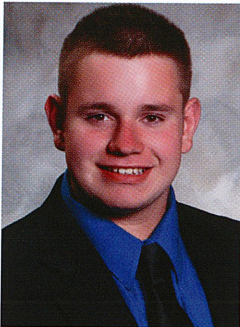

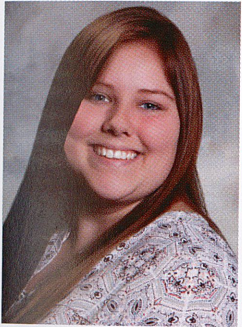

"It was tough walking out on that field for the last time. That team of boys became my family, and that sport was a huge part of my life. But I can't wait to see what college holds for me," Moorhead said.

TAKE A look back in time

Story by: R. Newton (12)

Seniors lend their expertise

Freshman year felt like worlds away for any senior class. The first year of high school consisted of football games, awkward first dances, and the new world that the high school offered. The awkward past didn't stop at freshman year; it continued throughout their high school experience. Many wish that they could go back and change what decisions they had made or what things they had done.

"I would have told myself not to have taken as many AP classes because they really stressed me out and I think I would have done better in my other classes without them," Colin Joyner (12) said.

"What I would tell my freshman self would be not to procrastinate, don't overload yourself, and always try your hardest. It may seem like the toughest thing you'll ever do in your life but it will be so worth it," Haylee Shoemaker (12) advises.

Though they may have seemed to be some of the scariest and most unreachable people on campus, the senior class was always there to be a guiding light for the underclassmen. After living it themselves, their advice was duly noted.

HAPPY birthday to you

Story by: C. Chickerella (10)

Students celebrate 18th birthdays

With the end of high school, came the beginning of adulthood. Students' 18th birthdays marked the transition from teenager to adult. It documented a great milestone of any young person's life, and many people held very grand and special celebrations for this very special birthday.

"I was in Virginia Beach on my actual birthday for a wrestling match, but then we went to Disney World for my present," said Isaac Reid (12).

The elaborate birthday celebrations of students demonstrated the great importance of their 18th birthday to them. Each entrance to adulthood differed in one way or another.

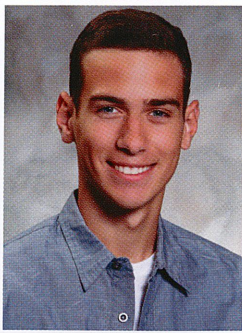

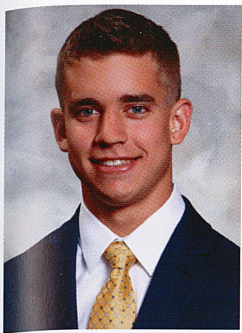

Madison Sieckowski (12) said, "For my 18th birthday, I went midnight bowling because I could officially drive after 11, and also I bought myself a Peppa Pig ice cream cake because she's iconic."

Seniors wear college gear in high school

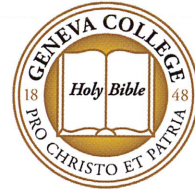

All around school, it was not uncommon to see students of all grades repping their favorite colleges. Whether showcasing the college the student planned to attend or simply a stylistic choice, he or she found a way to incorporate a favorite campus into everyday life.

For Lucy Bowser (12), it became a matter of showing pride for the school.

Bowser said, "I wear shirts related to University of Pittsburgh to support my brother, who is enrolled there." If not a matter of pride, wearing college gear may have acted as a fashion statement.

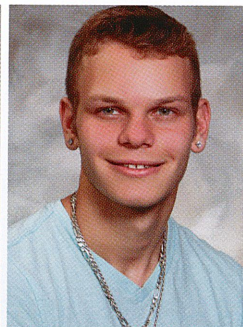

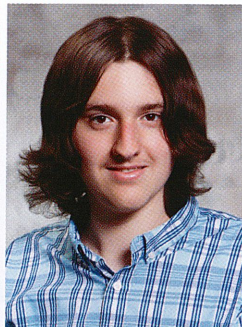

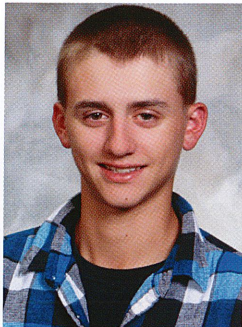

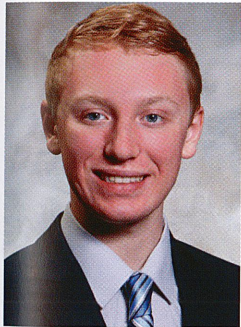

Willy Walker (12) said, "I usually opt for a short sleeved Washington and Jefferson College shirt because you can't always wear long sleeves year round. It gets too hot in the summer for sweatshirts and long sleeves."

FRIENDSHIPS

made to last

Story by: A. Chickerella (12)

Seniors value relationships built over four years

After four years in the same halls, many people came and went. Some of the best friendships began in high school while others cultivated during early childhood. Frank Bell (12) and Jacob Scheibel (12) became friends early on in their educational career, and they formed a friendship that wound up lasting all of high school.

Bell (12) said, "Jake and I do everything together. We always hang out and go on adventures. We have a bunch of other friends in our group, as well. Everytime we hang out, we have a blast."

The boys always bonded over school and hobbies. They sometimes held video game tournaments among their friend groups and invited others to compete as well.

Scheibel (12) said, "I'm glad I have such a friend group. High school is a stressful time, and having guys I can lean on made it bearable. My friends are the biggest jerks I know, and that is why I love them."

WAIT... i'm a senior now?

Story by: A. Koontz (12)

Seniors realize their time is dwindling

There were moments over the span of senior year that brought us all to a halt. The minute we realized that our last first day of high school ended. The final dance of our final homecoming. The sound as the timer goes off once we've finished our SATs. All of us came to the realization at some point that our high school careers would soon come to a close.

"I realized I was actually a senior when I sat down in Ms. Pav's class and she called us kids, but then corrected herself to call us young adults. That was a weird moment," Tret McElfresh (12) said.

One by one, we all accepted the choices we made that led us to whom we became as seniors. College and the real world threatened to approach at an unprecedented pace, but the senior class made it their mission to live in every second that would soon become a memory.

LET'S GET to work

Story by: S. Ross (11)

Students enter the workforce

For a lot of students, growing up meant getting a job. Jobs helped students gain maturity, and they learned about adulthood by entering the workforce. Jobs also helped provide financial freedom to students, allowing them the opportunity to experience more independence. With new jobs came new experiences, some of which turned out very weird.

Aaleya Williams (11) said, "I was standing by my face painting cart outside Heinz field before the game, and one of the police dogs that walks around the stadium walked up to me and started sniffing my feet. The dog wouldn't leave so the police officer gave me a suspicious look. He asked me if I was hiding something in my socks or shoes; then, the dog suddenly peed on me."

Jobs held a great deal of importance, but they do bring along a lot of strange experiences. With these strange experiences, however, come humorous memories to be shared.

Upper Cafe vs. Lower Cafe

"In my opinion, the lower cafe has a better variety of food to pick from. The tables in the lower cafeteria are nicer because they only have 8 seats, so you're not squished into a long table. I also think the food is prepared better in the lower cafe."

Alexa Nagy (11)

"The upper cafeteria is better than the lower cafeteria because it is not crowded, and it is kept at a more comfortable temperature. I also prefer the rectangular table in the upper cafe because they seat more people."

Anxiety settles in Junior year: stress, serious decision-making, cramming, homework, and more stress. The list of stressors ranged from pesky presentations to after-school sports. Somehow, high school students everywhere have discovered their own quirky ways to cope with pressure.

Shedding light on the importance of friendship, Bria Giovannelli (11) said, "I think asking friends for guidance and hanging out with them is the best way to get rid of stress."

For Danny Molyneaux (11), an upcoming AP Chemistry test becomes a clear path to anxiety. How does he change the destination?

"Sitting in a quiet room or watching YouTube videos is really relaxing when it feels like studying is the only thing I can do," Molyneaux said.

Sophia Costa (11) discovered that a positive attitude went a long way in relativity to the pressures of schoolwork.

"My future depends on the hours that I spend studying and doing homework so I have to try my best so that I can accomplish my goals," Costa said.

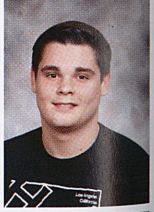

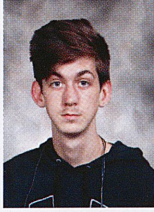

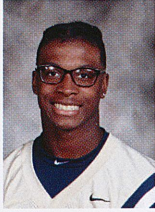

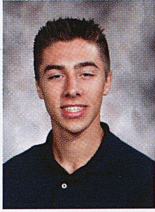

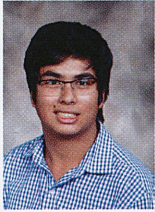

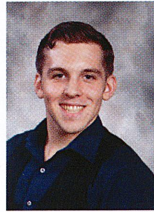

Remembering that every ounce of stress will eventually turn into success helped another student cope, too.

"I know that all of stress-filled all-nighters will pay off in the end," Kali Lewis (11) said.

JUNIORS on the job

Story by: C. Chickarella (11)

Students land their first job

From the enticing smell of food cooking to the mundane sound of the cash register ringing, first jobs were never easily forgotten. Most students got their jobs in order to reap the benefits, and some fell in love with their jobs along the way.

"I love my job. My favorite part is helping customers pick outfits and gifts," Brittany Rupert (11), who worked at Justice, said.

Erin Baum (11), who worked as a snack bar attendant at the Galleria, said, "I love working with such sweet children and being surrounded by positive people."

Like most young employees, Baker Law (11) despised the long and grueling hours that go hand-in-hand with having a job. Yet, he still managed to look on the bright side.

"I don't like the fact that I work so much, but in return I get money," Law said. He worked at Wendy's.

No matter how you feel about your first job, you'll always remember it - or at least what you got with your paycheck.

THROWBACK to freshman year

Story by: C. McGuire (10)

Sophomores reminisce on freshmen days

The ninth grade year can be a scary time for young freshmen. They fear the horror stories from upperclassmen and dread the monsters called 'midterms' and 'finals.' On the other hand, some feel that freshmen should receive some extra help due to overwhelming pressure. "They don't have the option to take AP classes and get more 'free' classes such as resource...I do think their classes are easier. With AP classes, it is easy to feel overwhelmed. 9th grade was easier," Kate Zezyus said (10).

However, one sophomore disagreed.

"Freshman year wasn't that difficult, and neither is being a sophomore. As long as you do your work, you're fine," Tyler McCandless said (10). Although, he did feel that being a sophomore was better than being a freshman.

"In 9th grade, you are at the bottom of the barrel. It's nice to be going up," McCandless said. This seemed a common opinion among the tenth graders.

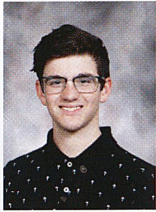

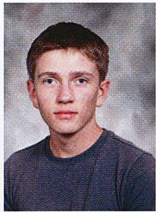

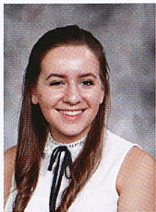

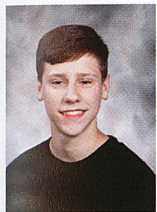

Sophomore year sometimes underwhelms. With only a Literature Keystone and no pressure to choose a college, tenth grade seems like the middle year. In reality, it's a bridge to seniority.

Story by: C. McGuire (10)

Sophomores describe favorite music styles

Music had such a powerful impact on people. They heard the melodies and the lyrics that could bring emotions to even the most stoic person.

"My favorite artist is John Cooper from Skillet because his songs all have deep meanings, and Skillet is one of the first bands I listened to with my dad," Kaelee Koffler said (10).

Additionally, music inspired one person to accomplish his wildest dreams.

"I started my YouTube channel for my passion of music. I feel like I can express myself by making music. My current favorites are xxxtentacion, Ski Mask the Slump Dog, and Kendrick Lamar," Sean Adamski said (10). Among some 10th graders, Adamski became infamous for his music channel. In fact, several students are even fans. Certainly, songs made us cry, laugh, and smile.

Students admit amount of time spent in digital world

In a world where even parents and grandparents had social media profiles, many individuals took a more creative approach with their online presence. The term 'finsta' described an Instagram parody account.

Jaden Myers (10) said, "It can be nice to post things that you normally wouldn't put on a main account. If people enjoy posting every little aspect of their lives, then I would suggest making one."

Others, such as Sienna Lyons (10), used their platforms as a way to express their sense of humor.

Lyons revealed, "I think of my account as literal spam. It's annoying but good, and funny things will occasionally pop up. My account is mostly used for posting pictures of my pets or funny memes."

The finsta fad may not work for everyone, but the free reign of what these accounts could feature allowed individuals to take a break from the social normality of social media.

Freshmen look to senior year

Even though freshman year initiated the total four years of high school, students in ninth grade began to think about their plans for the future. While they carried on with their current coursework, thoughts of the future and college quickly approached. Multiple students planned ahead for their future before embarking on their freshman year.

"In four years, I hope to have graduated high school with good grades, attended the college of my choice, and pursued a career field of my choice," Nicolas Slomka (9) said.

Some freshmen planned to become successful and wished to have high hopes for their future.

"In four years I'll be graduating high school and going to college for nursing," Paige Faulk (9) said.

While some students planned to follow their parents' footsteps when thinking about college, others created their own pathways.

"In four years, I hope to be pursuing a career in math at Carnegie Mellon University. I also hope to be happy," Valerie McMullen (9) said.

Rick and Morty

"Rick and Morty is very complex with their grammar and their adventures.

Rick and Morty is based on scientific theories that may or may not be true. Rick and Morty has a lot of twists and will keep you entertained until it's over. It's definitely worth binge watching in my opinion"

Justyn Harding (9)

"In my opinion, I feel that Rick and Morty is a very good show. The creators of this show do a good job at coming up with new episodes every week. This is one of those shows that will keep you laughing and entertained."

Ethan Hawley (9)

Students describe their favorite binge-worthy shows

Binge-watching TV shows and movies played an essential role in a typical high schooler's day. Whether before school, during school, or after school, teens watched television shows and all kinds of movies. Netflix acted as the most popular application to access TV shows and movies. Some popular Netflix Original TV shows for teens include "Making a Murderer," "Stranger Things," and "Fuller House." Even network TV shows such as "The Office," "American Horror Story," and "Grey's Anatomy," complimented Netflix's catalogue.

A subscription to Netflix provided many exciting options for the owner. Once they owned a Netflix account, most subscribers eliminated their cable or satellite television provider. While possibly illegal, one perk to a subscription to Netflix included the possibility to share accounts.

"I have 7 profiles on my Netflix account," Mason Hall (9) said.

The number of profiles differed depending on the person.

"Only my family shares my Netflix account," Mackenzi Bigley (9) said.

Friends and family would benefit from owning a Netflix account, as well. "I'd have to say I have about seven to eight profiles because we just share the account with friends," Kendall Held (9) said.

HARDSHIPS

on the horizon

Story by: C. Chickerella (10)

Freshman adjust to unexpected hurdles

The transition from middle school to high school filled freshmen with anxiety and nerves. The beginning of high school marked one of the most important milestones in a student's life. Many freshmen feared this change, and they encountered several unexpected difficulties.

Alison Skelly (9) said, "I would say just remembering when tests are and getting homework done since I don't have the same classes every day was tough."

Although the Day A and Day B schedule allowed students to have more time to complete homework, it made it harder to keep track of homework due dates. The year progressed, though, and freshmen quickly adjusted to this difficulty.

The high school building itself proved rather hard and confusing to navigate as well. Freshmen soon learned their way around the school, and this allowed for them to grow much more comfortable in the new building and setting.

Game of Thrones

Mrs. Flick (fac) shares her thoughts on her favorite show...

"Game of Thrones...what can I say that hasn't already been said. Plenty, but I will keep my commentary to the things the show does the best. First, strong lead female characters above all else are the backbone of the show. Whether you are watching and cheering Daenerys Stormborn (Calisi) and her troops on her fiery dragon, or cringing through Cersei Lannister's walk of shame and final redemption when she orchestrates the destruction of the Great Sept of Baelor or mourning with and cheering on Arya Stark through the loss of her father, her own kidnapping, and subsequent renewal with joining the Faceless Men as a mercenary, the women endure, overcome, and seize the advantage time and time again.

Second, the sprawling landscapes always keep us as an audience on the edge of our seats. My favorite settings are Winterfell, The Wall, and the Kingdom of Westeros. It is never a dull moment whether you are sailing, flying by dragon, or riding by horse from the Iron-born Isles to Casterly Rock or even beyond the Wall. Lastly, the intrigue and struggle for power between families, kingdoms, individuals, and now the undead take the audience on a journey that at times is reminiscent of current events. Watching the Lannisters struggle to keep their power from being usurped by the Targaryens or the White Walkers is the culminating event for the upcoming season and for that I cannot wait..."

from the ground up

Brick after brick, we laid the foundation for the rest of our futures. We learned to string better sentences that built more eloquent papers in the 200 building. Experiments completed in the upstairs labs sparked future researchers. Robots that emerged out of the Tech Department gave hints as to who the engineers of tomorrow will become. Each day of the four years we all spent here seemed to drag on endlessly, but only in the end did we realize how quickly the years had actually passed.

"As much as getting up every morning didn't seem optimal, when I look at even just my writing from freshmen year to now, I see how all of the work I did was worth it. When it comes to writing though, I have Ms. Heasley and Mrs. Jacobs to really thank completely for that," Taylor Love (12) said.

We cemented memories alongside skills we gained each weekday between 7:40 and 2:44 to construct our high school experience.

Hallie Zidek (12) said, "I looked forward to the end of the day for sure, but I know I'm ready for college after all of the late nights I've put in. Yearbook showed me how to balance my time between school and something that really means a lot to me."

WHAT HELPS YOU SURVIVE BAND CAMP?

TICK TOCK time is up

Story by: W. Walker (12)

Marching band gives their all up to last second

Rather than conform to the modern marching world of pop and classical music, band director Robert Traugh (fac) decided to boldly stand out by bringing the band back to its glory days: jazz.

The show, Echoes In Time, featured jazz music from the 1993 show A Tribute To Dizzy incorporated in with the modern twist so craved in the marching world. Audience members and judges alike became dazzled in the tick-tock world of a time long past attempting to make itself anew.

The band's bold actions didn't stop there. They achieved something new by going westward to the Dayton Regional, which boasted competition the band had not yet seen.

Facing giant bands and dangerous weather, the band performed valiantly, but severe weather forced the cancellation of Finals.

"It was hard to toss flags in the wind. I think we did the best that we could've done given the circumstances," Sarah Martin (10) said.

The band received 4th place overall for the general effect category, behind two Grand National medalists.

Jason Pellegrini (12) said, "The memories I've made this year will last me a lifetime."

As seniors come and go, the shows of the past became just another echo in time.

Standing At Attention...

In full red, white, and blue attire, Jenna Schindler (12) strikes an upward motion with her flag. "The whole band in that moment just had an electric feel, and we had one goal in mind," Schindler said. That night was the first time they were allowed to wear normal clothes to support their team.

"I went to the Bahamas and swam with stingrays. That was pretty BOLD."

Students choose Vo-Tech to jump start their career paths

Vo-Tech programs offered at the Northern Westmoreland Career and Technology Center provided a multitude of useful trades for students. Students had the option to learn about specific skills they wanted to pursue, and they had the ability for the immediate entrance into the line of work they studied. However, some students chose to continue with school and go to college to further their education.

"I chose Vo-Tech to learn more about the field in which I want to hopefully get a future career in. So, in Vo-Tech I am studying in the field of culinary arts. I chose to do tech instead of college because I want to pursue my dream of actually becoming a chef," Austin Thompson (9) said.

If someone's looking to delve deeper into the culinary arts, they should try the programs offered at the NWCTC. The trades offered allow students to directly enter the workforce without the tedious hassle of the general education courses required for large colleges and universities.

"At this current point in time, I do not know if I will attend a specific college, but if I do, I will attend for Culinary Arts," Austin Thompson (9) said.

COLOR coded school days

Students organize their lives

The human brain often found associations between certain activities. This proved true when it comes to school subjects. It seems that most students can agree on what color goes to what subject.

For science, students overwhelmingly chose green.

"I relate the color green to science because when I think of green, I think of Earth," Malcolm Holden (10) said. The color for English that was most popular was blue.

"I associate blue with English because English is one of my favorite classes and it's relaxing for me" Abbigail Dunmire (11) said. Then, for math, the most common color was red.

"Red is an angry color and math makes me angry," Maura Stone (10) said. Finally, for history, the color was yellow.

"History is yellow to me because history is full of bright things," Rome Oliver (9) said. As these students have shown, color has a powerful effect over people. They made a person see the world differently.

CHEMICAL experiment

Sophomores blaze a new trail into AP Chem

Entry to the world of AP level classes and AP level stress had previously been reserved for students in the junior and senior years exclusively. Until this year, sophomores became eligible for the challenge of Honors Chemistry.

A small faction of sophomores with no background experience spent days of their summer upstairs in Ms. Scalise's room to prepare them for advanced level chem.

"AP Chem as a sophomore is most definitely a challenge. It's difficult to walk into it a year behind everyone that already has background knowledge," Alex Zambotti (10) said.

The young chemists remained as positive as possible when faced with their massive new challenge.

"There's no doubt you're going to struggle. I've kind of put myself in the mindset of 'fake it til you make it.' If you want to be successful, you have to actually use your Lunch & Learn time. Some of us spend the entire 72 minutes up there; we just eat our lunch with Ms. Scalise while we work," Ashley Scanga (10) said.

KEY CLUB'S night of

Story by: A. Chickerella (12)

Students perform for great causes

Through all the lights, cameras, makeup, and glitter, the packed auditorium and lit stage served a meaningful purpose for the Key Club. Every year, the Key Club presented a talent show in which the proceeds went to charity. Proceeds were split between Habitat for Humanity and a local elementary school. Efforts raised nearly a thousand dollars.

Youth from all ages participated in the talent show and displayed a variety of talents. From ribbon dancing to ventriloquism, students from kindergarten to twelfth grade performed their hearts out.

Cheyenne Cramer (10), participated in the show for the fifth time this year. She began singing at the age of eight.

"I love the show," Cramer (10) said, "I sing old country, Broadway, and gospel songs. Performing gives me the chance to display my versatility."

The show also hosted a popular band, Black Motel. Black Motel, comprised of Karl Schmeltzer (12), Tristan Vasko (12), Jacob Debik (11), and a graduated student, originated last year and quickly became a crowd favorite. The band typically played rock and vintage music.

"This year, it was just Karl and I for the performance," Tristan Vasko (12) said, "We ended up playing a duet, but it was great."

Down by a small margin in the first round of the Intramural Flag Football Playoffs, AJ's angels became covered in all areas. All team members rendered unable to take the ball, except for one. After having broken loose, Aaron John (12) managed to make a play.

Sprinting down the length of the football field John delivered the ball to the endzone, simultaneously thrilled his teammates and devastated the opposing team.

Team members Danny Starr (12), Joe Beddick (12), Jeff Wilkinson (12), Cody Ford (12), and Keaton Moorehead (12) cheered as the face from their team shirts went tearing down the field.

After having gained the lead, Aaron John continued to help his team as they advanced onto the net round of playoff competition.

Cosmo students get a sense of their future careers

Snip, snip! While most sounds at the Northern Westmoreland Career and Technology Center involved buzzing saws and heavy machinery, the sounds that emanated from the cosmetology department involved lots of scissor blades, shavers, hair dryers, and hair salon gossip.

While the noise of buzz saws slicing away at wood may sound masculine and tough, the cosmetology students had an even bolder job: to handle their blades mere millimeters away from people's heads. Of course they did not start slicing away with real people's hair; they started their clipping journeys with prosthetic hair and then moved on to the real thing.

"Fake hair is more coarse, so it was hard to cut real hair because you didn't know how it would turn out," Emily Hooper (12) said.

ACROSS borders

Story by: W. Walker (12)

Students access resources via technology from across the world

Swipe! All over the school, chalkboards squeaked and SMART boards blinked as teachers wrote, solved, and taught. Whether classrooms echoed from the swipe of the chalk or the swipe of a finger, teachers used their cultured education skills combined with new contemporary methods to best educate their students.

While students have become accustomed to the swipe, most have never experienced the Skype. Much different from textbook scenarios, students in Mrs. McAfee's Modern World History classes got to experience the real thing. Thanks to modern advancements, the class conversed with people across the world in Israel and the United Kingdom.

"My goal was to Skype with six countries this school year," Mrs. McAfee said. "I wanted the students to be able to interact with other peers around the world so they have an idea about the day to day lives of kids outside of the United States."

The students found the experience both educational and enjoyable.

"I thought it was really interesting. It was weird seeing how similar they are to us, even though they lived so far away," Joni Shirey (11) said.

Technology has allowed education to evolve and allowed the students to travel the world without leaving the classroom. What has seemed out of reach before has become as easy as a swipe.

ALL THE way up

Students learn to keep up with new curriculum

Calculators beeped, pencils squeaked, instruments boomed, balls bounced. Boasting countless clubs and rigorous advanced classes, in-school and after-school life remained a bustling metropolis of new ideas.

The implementation of the new honors and AP curriculum brought waves of changes. The amount of students enrolled in AP classes doubled as the district received a grant to pay for the much-anticipated AP exams, which encouraged students to sign up for AP classes without hassle.

"I elected to take six AP classes because I wanted my PPA to get jacked up for my senior year," Karl Schmelzer (12) said. "I found the opportunity to skip junior year and graduate early so I took it. It can be a lot of hard work, especially when my entire day B is all AP, but the long-term benefits that will come of it are worth it."

On top of busy classes, multiple clubs and sports kept students busy. "During cheer season, it can be strenuous because I have cheer basically every day of the week," Olivia Chepkevich (12) said. "It's a lot of juggling with my schedule in order to keep up."

Heavy workloads test students

Fingers flew back and forth across the keys of calculators in Mrs. Schaeffer's AP Calculus class. Student mathematicians prepared themselves for the impending AP exam in the spring.

"We cover a lot and learn something new every class so you really have to stay on top of the work. We move pretty quickly from topic to topic to cover everything by the exam," Miranda Galo (12) said.

Other students felt the nightly pressure to crunch numbers. Hours spent pouring over equations, deriving functions, and differentiating limits meant securing a better grade in class and on the exam.

Brianna Scanga (12) said, "Every night, there is at least two homework assignments... and if there isn't, Jesus answered your prayers."

Tests mounted and notes became filled in, but in the end, AP Calc students solidified their knowledge in preparation for their futures in calculus and beyond.

Students tell their broken tales

Day in and day out, our Chromebooks live inside our backpacks, on our desks, and in the school hallways alongside us. These facts meant that sometimes along the way they got a little busted.

"I have no idea how it happened, but at some point I lost the G key on my keyboard, so it turns into kind of a pain every single time a word has the letter G in it," Sophia Costa (11) said.

Other students dealt with more than just a single missing letter.

Luke Hansberry (12) said, "My spacebar key went missing a long time ago so I have to make sure I hit it just right every time. More recently, the screen has gone permanently dim, I've tried everything. It's not coming back."

Chromebooks had their assortment of quirks and bugs. Even with their array of issues our entire school day seemed to revolve around making sure the wifi worked well enough to check our email and scroll through classroom.

"My chromebook was already a little broken when I got it, but I definitely broke it more once I got it," Logan Pollick (12) said.

THE ART OF culinary

Future chefs learn the basics

Art exists in many forms, including culinary. The district's vocational school offered a culinary department for students to learn in. There, students pursued their cooking passions and prepared themselves for future careers in the culinary field.

Culinary helped to teach students individuality, too. They had the ability to do what they loved and learn from it too. The Vo-Tech culinary department helped to jump-start student's culinary education.

Students did many projects in culinary. The variety of projects they completed allowed students to partake in a more diverse culinary experience. This provided students with a more balanced education. The culinary department also helped to teach students to have pride in their work and in themselves.

The new knowledge acquired from this class helped to better prepare students for future culinary careers. In Vo-Tech's culinary program, students wore proper chef attire. This made the experience even more realistic for students and set them up for future success. Culinary classes prepared students for a wide variety of culinary career paths, such as local chefs or further schooling in the department.

Changes make their way through the hallways

Moving into the 2017-2018 school year, new changes came to the Life Skills classroom. More than ever, students made their way into new courses and new fields with unseen opportunities that allowed each individual to develop more skills.

One new possibility for the students included the ability to integrate into core and elective curriculums. "I'm pretty good at my new math class and I love it very much! It is fun to learn the new things I'm being taught. I also like gym class because I can play my favorite sport, basketball," said junior Cameron Wickham.

Clubs had also become an outlet that allowed the students to express themselves. In Environmental Club, the students were given the chance to recycle alongside other club members. Cavalier Closet allowed the ambitious group to help the rest of the school population.

Another exciting change that the students faced was their entry into the workforce. Several Life Skills students got jobs at Kmart and worked alongside Kmart's employees. Others worked closely with St. Vincent DePaul and donated their time to making a difference in that area. This year brought the chance for the Life Skills classroom to truly show the school and community just how brightly that they could shine.

High school students become young yogis

Breathe in, breathe out. Breathe in, breathe out. Rather than balls that bounced and shoes that squeaked, the sounds that emanated from the Auxiliary Gym contained ones of relaxation and serenity.

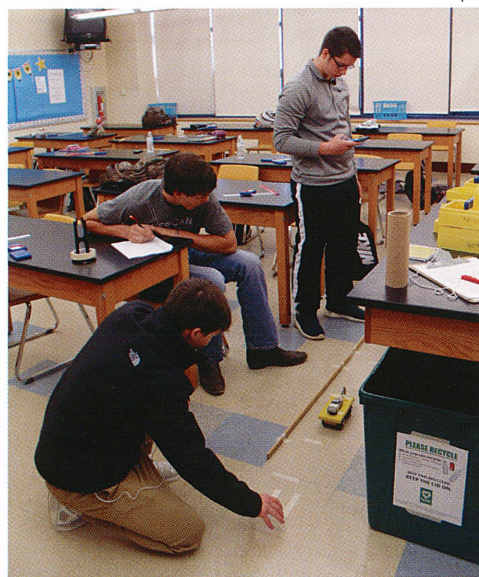

Due to the changes brought on by block scheduling, the physical education teachers became emboldened for change in the curriculum in favor of something new. These changes included creating "subcourses," which incorporate specific levels of physical activity for the betterment of the individual.

Among these course changes, the subclass yoga quickly gained popularity and attention. "A student approached me and asked about a course that she could use to relax. After days of thinking and research, I came up with the class and designed it to fit Physical Education standards," Ms. Rolling said. "It has been one of my most popular classes as students realize the importance of stress relief, ability to focus on connecting the mind and body and challenging the body."

While it doesn't boast the thrill of sports or the enthusiasm of competition, the yoga class has provided students with a calm and relaxed form of movement. "Going into it, I was a little concerned that it wouldn't be for me, but I realized it really was good fit. It gives time at the end of the day to collect myself and process all of the troubles and worries that I may or may not have," Jack Young (10) said. "I would recommend this class to anyone looking to unwind."

hurdle challenges to achieve personal bests

"Knowing I'm part of a team, I approach the game by thinking about when I can personally do best and what I know I cannot do to avoid letting them down. I think of how I can best contribute to the team," Ronnie Coleman (11) said.

Music blared through the speaker system of Gym A as a mass of varsity wrestlers emerged from the tunnel. The pounding footsteps of the so-called "band of brothers" rippled through the crowd as they anticipated another home win. Traditions of excellence transcended beyond whatever score remained once the clock ran out. Students learned the worth of individual responsibility in regards to something larger than themselves.

Longtime athlete and cross country coach Mr. Berzonsky said, "Many don't realize that cross country is a team sport. Being on a team makes the individual better because you don't want to let your teammates down. Sports are beneficial because athletes learn great habits. Those habits carry over to other facets of life. For example, great athletes set goals. Goal setting is also important academically and professionally."

Moments that counted for something became simply defined by why an individual athlete loved their sport of choice.

"My parents put me into sports when I was really young, and I just fell in love with them, but the bonds we create with teammates and coaches are why I truly love playing football. We all know that we give 100% all the time, together, without giving up. We are a family," Jesap Wilson (12) said.

Just after a heated play against the Norwin Knights, Cameron Guercio (12) gathers his wits before heading back out on the field.

Screaming with excitement, Peyton McCann (10) and his teammates revel in their victory. "We were all so hyped after a big play that went in our favor. There was so much energy; it's a memory I'll remember for the rest of my football career," McCann said. He had played football since middle school.

Coach Albert passes along notorious nicknames

Story by: S. Glentzner (11)

The beaming lights of the football field glowed for the team as they played their absolute best for coaches they built strong connections with, in a short span of time.

Tret McElfresh (12) said, "Over the course of the off-season, long practices, and Friday night games, the football team, along with the coaches, became a family."

The newest leader Coach Albert, who has built a special bond with each player, gave them each their own nickname.

"He's given me the nickname 'Snake,' because it was the nickname of an old lefty quarterback, and I throw with my left hand," Ryne Wallace (11) said.

Other memorable nicknames of this season followed suit: "Hollywood" Ross Greece (12), "Bravo" Dane Fitzsimmons (11), "Freak Zeke" Isaac Reid (12), and "Condor" Jack Colecchi (11).

"Coach Albert leads as an encouraging example and has made me a better player by making me take on a leadership role; he has built a bond with not only me, but the whole team," Drew Dinunzio-Biss (11) said.

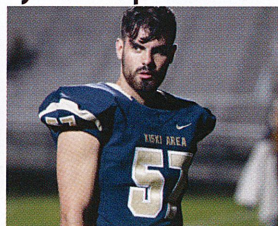

A season earmarked by nicknames, long practices, and new coaches made for a year-long learning experience.

Position you play and position you'd prefer...

"My current position is inside linebacker. I'd switch to outside linebacker; it's more fun."

Cody Collins (12)

"I play on the offensive line; I'd probably play running back because I want to be like Jerome Bettis."

Bryan Sames (12)

"Nose guard. If I didn't play nose, I'd play D-end because I like being on D-line, and that's the only other position on it."

Zachary Zambo (11)

Cheerleaders anchor the sidelines

Story by: W. Walker (12)

Jump, shake your booty! It would not have been a football or basketball game without the cheerleaders tossing and jumping. With a need to muster school spirit, the cheerleaders job was as much fun as it was strenuous.

Home football games have become known for our large student section. Due to larger student section numbers than in years past, the school spirit that emanated from Davis Field this year astounded opposing fans.

"Cheering with the student section is a lot of fun. I like when we get a touchdown and do the touchdown stunt," Cassidy Glunt (11) said.

In addition, the band added to their ranks, with both groups doing the iconic "Jump, Shake Your Booty" dance at almost every football game. "There weren't student sections at some of the away games so we decided to get the band hyped, too. We spend a lot of time cheering in front of them and figured it would be fun, and it definitely was," Bailey Ziencik (12) said.

When the Friday night lights came to a close, the cheerleaders enjoyed the eventful wrestling and basketball season, where larger student sections and a newly formed pep band helped to muster school spirit and cheer on the team to victory.

"Basketball games are fun because you get to be close to the court so we're close to the players. I enjoy myself every time I get to be with my squad," Valerie McMullen (9) said.

Crowd Pleaser...

Cheering loud to the student section, Kai Clayton (12) waves her pom high in the air. "There's nothing like cheering on home field to your student section; they get so involved and bring such an energy," Clayton said. She served as a captain of the varsity squad.

Softball team fights to playoffs

Story by: A. Chickerella (12)

In the sports world, even the underdogs stand a chance in the toughest of competitions. The softball team proved that they no longer fit the title of underdog or "easy win" because they finally held a rank in their section.

"Last year, we barely won a game," Jesse Simendinger (12) said. "The public was not very optimistic since our seniors were leaving, but our coaches kept telling us this season was going to be different."

Each season, Coach Jones and Coach Cortazzo provided their team with a mantra or slogan to reflect the season. They chose the lone word, "Perseverance."

"Perseverance truly did define our season. We lost some games, but we continued to persevere and we ended up making it to playoffs," Simendinger said.

An outfielder, Kelsey Sofaly (12) said, "We were all really excited going into the season. One of the best games was when we beat the 2nd seed in the WPIAL. It came down to one pitch, and the moment the other team struck out, we won."

Each softball game possessed a magical atmosphere, and the crowd felt as unified as the team did. The newspaper headline about the team read, "High School Softball Team Makes History."

Wrestling managers detail a winning season

The wrestling team showed great success this year, and the efforts of the wrestling managers contributed to helping them achieve all that they did. Throughout the season, the wrestling managers organized and helped the wrestlers. They were assigned different jobs to make matches run more smoothly and overall provided a great amount of support and encouragement to everyone.

A wrestling manager herself, Nevaeh Bernat (10) expressed, "I definitely enjoy the learning experience I get from working with the athletic trainers here. My most memorable moment was when a wrestler from Armstrong had a bloody nose and sneezed, splattering blood all over the mat. It wasn't fun to clean up, but sure made for an entertaining story."

The wrestlers greatly appreciated all of the assistance that the managers provided for them. "The managers are a vital part of the team, they always cheer on the person wrestling and are always there to help keep scores and record matches," said wrestler Justin Hessom (10).

Hard at work on the football field, Nevaeh Bernat (10) collects the players' water bottles. "At first, I wanted to be a physical therapist, but after becoming a trainer, I decided this is what I wanted to do," Bernat said. Bernat works full time as a trainer, participating in other sports such as baseball and basketball.

Mackenzie Toth (12) stood confidently on The Apollo Elks Golf Course tee box, clenching a seven iron in her hands. Toth pulled the club high in the air, and with one powerful swing, achieved a once-in-a-lifetime shot that many professional golfers only dream of: a hole-in-one.

According to Toth, she became the only one on the team, coaches included, to ever accomplish this. The match hadn't gone very well, and Toth had not expected it to improve anytime soon. Toth explained that she was so shocked by her achievement that she didn't believe it at first.

"I spent a long time trying to find the ball before I even thought to look in the hole," Toth said.

As far as praise goes, Toth became overwhelmed by it.

"The other girls on the team were more excited for me than I was, and my dad was calling everyone he knew to tell them the news," Toth said.

An achievement as such deserved all the exhilarated responses. The chances of an average golfer making a hole-in-one stand at 12,500 to 1. Still Toth managed to defy those odds with one exemplary shot.

FISH NEVER out of water

Swim team members never leave the pool

Story by: W. Walker (12)

Splash! At the sound of the beep, swimmers sprang off of their boards into the frigid depths in the quest to break old records, sealing their legacy upon the pool wall. From 4 AM practices to late night meets, the question arises arose on whether they ever left the pool.

With all of the bustling activity taking place during the winter and spring months, one might have wondered whether the summer months offered any rest and relaxation. But, that was certainly not the case; between employment and local organizations, the members of the swim team remained near the pool twelve months in the year.

Many members found employment during the summer months as lifeguards at local pools, using their skills learned during the winter swim season to keep them active in the summers.

"Being in the water in the summer helps prepare you for the winter. Watching other people swim helps me improve my own ability," Dan Watt (11) said.

In addition to summer employment, the majority of the swim team also participated in the summer swim league, the Cavalier Swim Club.

"CSC keeps me in shape throughout the summer months, too. There's really only four weeks in the year that I'm not in the pool," Meredith Pepka (11) said.

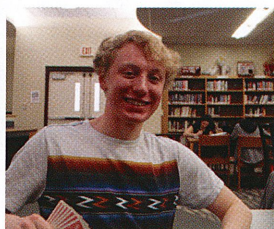

These additional activities allowed the swimmers to further improve their abilities and allowed them to break records and frame their accomplishments. Just a drop in the pool had a wave of an impact.

Girls' basketball team captures section win

Season after season of hard work came and went for the girls' basketball team. Earnest attempts filled the scorecard at the close of each season.

"This season, being my senior season, was definitely bittersweet. Out of all the years I've played, this was definitely my favorite. We beat Plum, meaning that we had our first section win in three years. I appreciate the fact that Coach Ionadi helped us improve a lot over the years," Katelyn Brown (12) said.

The perfect storm of years of dedication from seniors and fresh talent from the underclassmen brought out the best in the girls' team this past season.

They learned to work as a unit and communicated on the court as they progressed through their season. The girls' basketball team exemplified what happens when perseverance wins.

Huddle Up...

Standing on the sidelines, members of the girls' basketball team listen to Coach Ionadi. "Whenever we break the huddle, we all put our hands in and say 'hard work on three,' before we break," Leah Simendinger (10) said. Simendinger has played the sport since the fifth grade.

"The second time we played Armstrong was so much more intense because we felt like we had to redeem ourselves after losing the first time," Zelonka said. The girls' chances of making the playoffs rested on a win against Armstrong.

"It was both honoring and exciting to be named the Tribune-Review player of the week."

Game Plan...

In a team huddle, Katelyn Brown (12) listens to her coach's instructions. "The huddle is super important because it allows for team communication," Brown said. Brown always knew that instructions on defense would be given in the huddle.

Dribble It...

Dodging her opponents, Hannah Potter (10) goes for the hoop. "Playing Armstrong was one of our toughest games this year, but we played strong the whole way through. Even though we didn't pull out the win, we never gave up," Potter said. Potter has played on the varsity team since her freshman year.

Tennis team sets expectations

The boys' and girls' tennis teams served up another season with great ambitions and high expectations. Their persistence towards excellence prepared them for their tough singles and doubles competition.

"I thought we would do pretty decent this season," Dylan Knowles (12) said. "But when the season ended, I felt like I wanted to play more. The season wasn't long enough, and I wanted to get better."

The teams had no problem dominating the courts when it came time for a match. They not only displayed their dedication, but proved their unity. Putting aside the fun and entertainment when stepping onto the court, they played effectively.

"I love playing so much because our team is so free spirited and energetic. There is never a time that we are not smiling or joking with each other," Olivia Shirley (12) said.

The teams also had some great reasons for why they loved playing tennis.

Lexy Pollick (10) said, "What made playing tennis fun was probably being able to make memories with my friends and coach throughout the season."

Volleyball team earns playoff playoff spot

Story by: W. Walker (12)

As the sun set on an unusually warm October evening, it marked the conclusion of the day, but the sun didn't set on the volleyball team's season. Tears turned to cheers as the team realized they had one more chance to play the sport that they loved.

After a hard fought battle against Fox Chapel on the glinting new floors of Gym A, they secured their playoff entrance with a 3-1 win, turning their senior night conclusion into a senior night continuation.

"I couldn't believe it. I was in shock, and I was excited considering it has been a while since we have made it to playoffs," Ashley Debich (10) said.

The win marked the first time the team has entered the playoffs in six years. They fought boldly, but lost in the first game by a mere three points.

"Neither of my sisters made playoffs in high school, so it felt unreal how much we had accomplished. The moment we clinched a playoff spot the same night as senior night will always hold a special spot in my heart," Sophie McDermott (12) said.

Discuss the best part of senior night.

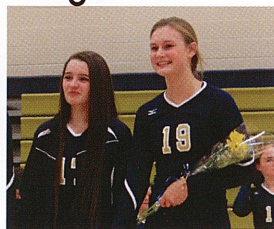

"The best part of senior night would have been clinching a playoff spot which has not been done in six years."

Kayla Zelonka (11)

Wrestling team smashes states once again

Two shoulders down, one big pin. As the season-ending WPIAL championship match against Canon McMillan drew to a close, Danny Starr (12) overpowered his opponent and slammed him onto the mat. The wrestlers captured the WPIAL championship for the second year in a row.

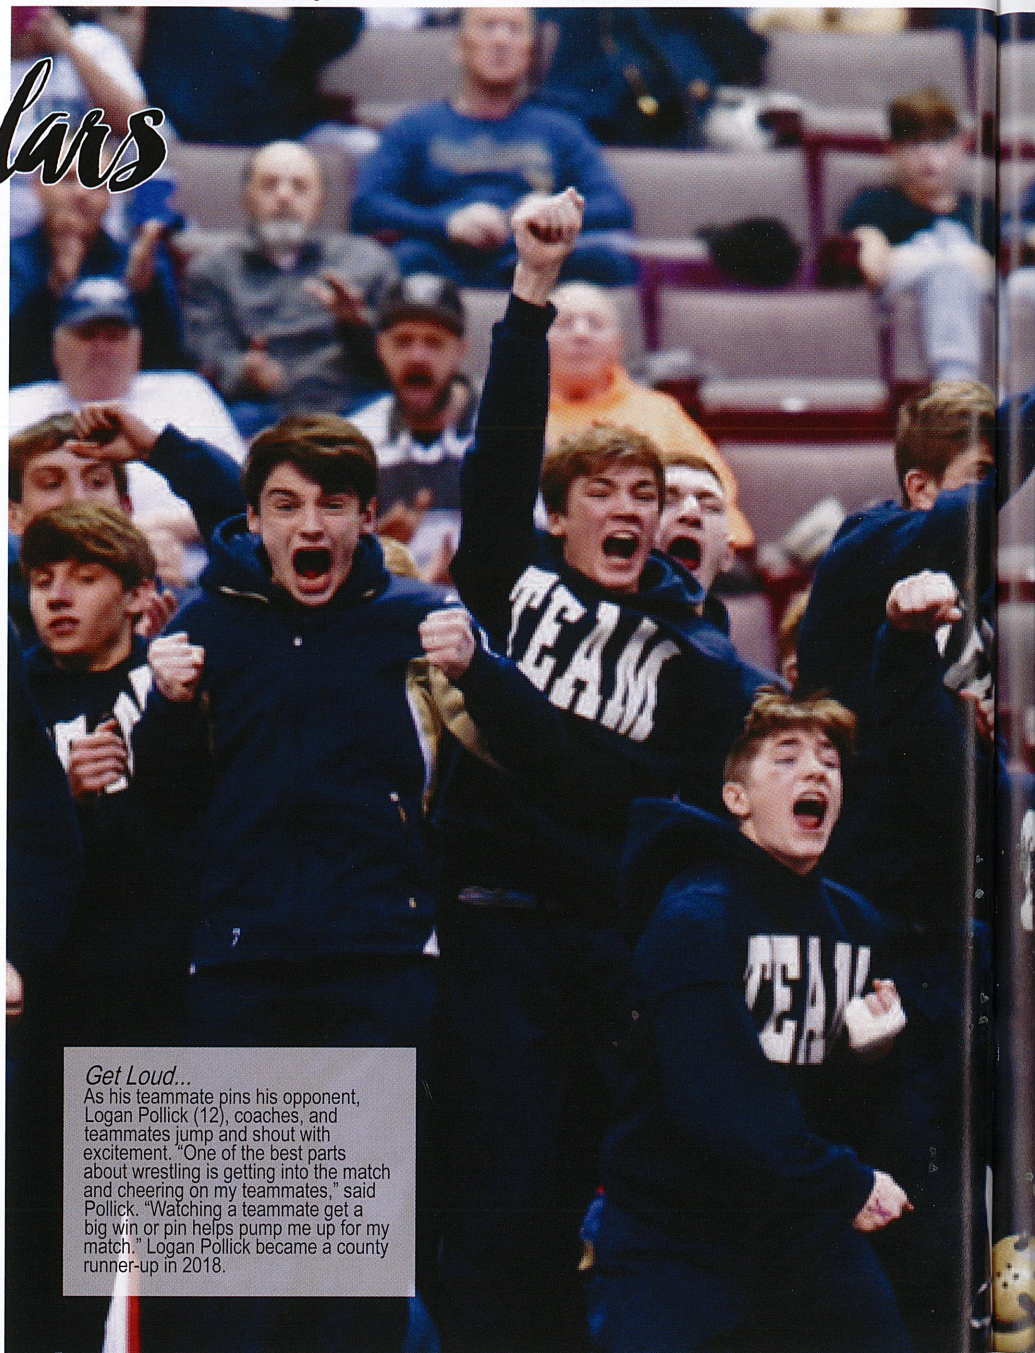

"It was such an exciting moment. Seeing all my teammates going crazy on the sidelines made me feel ecstatic. I was really relieved I was able to secure the win in what was such a huge team effort for my team and for my school," Danny Starr (12) said.

Because of their great finish at the local competitions, the wrestlers achieved the opportunity to advance to the state level again. But, instead of only placing third overall like last year, they managed to place second at states, becoming the highest placing public school within the state of Pennsylvania.

"It was bittersweet that we got so far but fell so close. But, when I sit back and look at it, I must realize that being second in AAA states is insanely impressive especially as the only freshman on the team," Sammy Starr (9) said.

It marked the second time in school history where the wrestlers earned second at states, with the first time over a decade ago in 2003. They have never won first place at states.

"To make sure we place higher next year, we have to work hard during the offseason. #Homegrown," Darren Miller (11) said.

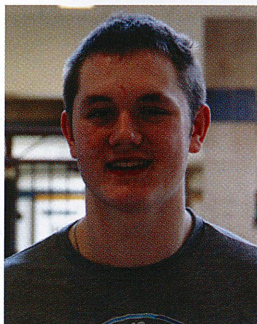

Get Loud...

As his teammate pins his opponent, Logan Pollick (12), coaches, and teammates jump and shout with excitement. "One of the best parts about wrestling is getting into the match and cheering on my teammates," said Pollick. "Watching a teammate get a big win or pin helps pump me up for my match." Logan Pollick became a county runner-up in 2018.

CROSS THE finish line

Cross country team races past challenges

"Cross country is really an adaptive sport," Nick Gabrielli (12) said. "Every course we race on is different, and every different course consists of over three miles of different terrain that we need to adjust to. Collectively, we all really prefer running at Roaring Run."

The cross country team ran into a slight hitch before the fall season began. Construction on the school's new football stadium upturned the home course. Forced to improvise, Coach Berzonsky and captains Nick Gabrielli (12) and Brittney Drobka (12) found a way to continue the team's practice and meet schedule at various alternate courses.

Angelo Pisani (11) said, "I honestly sort of liked being at locations other than the school. Our home course was very boring and did not give us any home advantage. I always really liked practicing at Roaring Run, and I was glad we got to spend more time there."

Roaring Run represents one of the many different locations the cross country team traveled to while they made the most of their home course situation. The team completed the season at Cooper's Lake where Kierra Shreffler (11) qualified for states.

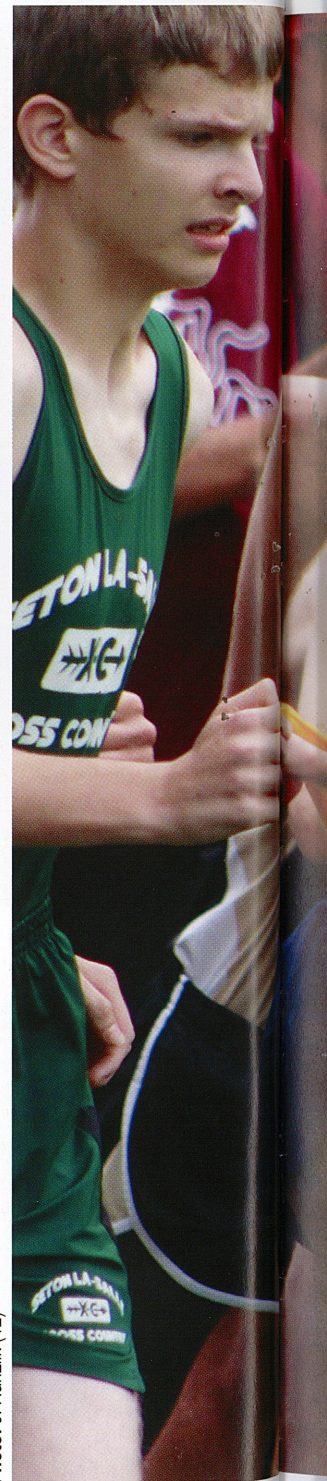

Think It Over...

Tuning out the competition, Kierra Shreffler (11) prepares mentally for a competition. "I get nervous sometimes on the starting line so after we do our sprint drills together as a team I focus in," Shreffler said. Blocking out the chaotic atmosphere of large invitational could prove a challenge for many competitors.

Tucked Or Untucked...

To start the race at Northmoreland Park, Nick Gabrielli (12) untucks his shirt for running comfort. Cross Country regulations required all runners to display tucked in shirts to begin each meet.

Seniors reflect on their time on team

Story by: A. Koontz (12)

The massive fluorescent lights above the turf flickered on as the team took their place on the field for the National Anthem. One hand on their heart and one hand on the teammate's shoulder in front of them became a repetitive sight as the country's theme song rang out through the speakers. At the conclusion, the boys' soccer team sprang into action, darting back and forth across the field for the next few hours.

Colin Joyner (12) said, "I loved getting to be a senior captain this year, and I really tried my best to be a role model for the younger players. I tried to teach and help them as much as I could. Plus, it made for an added incentive to come back from my injury because I wanted to be there to lead my team."

Soccer memories spread out over years of playing experience. "I think out of all my years playing for Kiski, when I look back, my sophomore year when we beat all of the odds to make playoffs is by far the highlight of my time on the team. It's going to be so weird next year to not be playing with these guys," Dylan Knowles (12) said.

Final games hit close to home for seniors

Seniors looked forward to their final season during long practices filled with endless drills and tough games with tireless opponents. Once that final year and that final game arrived, seniors felt the emotions a little bit more.

"During our senior night, we went into the game knowing they had a better record than us. The game started and through our student section and the overall hype of the crowd we as a team pulled off a 6-1 victory over Westmont Hilltop. They're a really good team," Mike Eisaman (12) said. "It was a very emotional and dramatic game for all of the seniors especially," Eisaman continued.

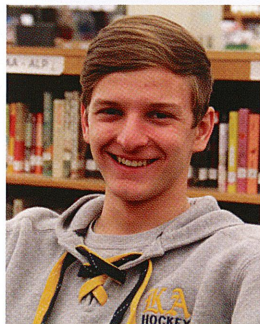

Regardless of how much they wanted one more chance to suit up and don Kiski's blue and gold hues, the time-clock of their high school athletic days ticked down to zero.

Track team hurdles over difficulties

Participating as a team like a well-oiled machine stood as one of the main focuses of participants of the 2016-2017 track season. On the road to success, and the key to success revolved around the trust that the proud team members had for each other.

While intensely competitive events presented themselves at the core of any track meet; that did nothing to stop the companionship and tight-knit bond that grew between such talented young people.

"I've made so many friends and created so many memories that I have no idea how I'm possibly going to feel at the end of my last season," Ethen Hammer (12) said.

An almost perfect season surpassed what any of the team members could have imagined. Senior Lara Webster ran in the distance events at meets.

"We are always there for each other, no matter what the circumstances are. We're always there helping and cheering one another along," Webster (12) said.

Toss It...

With dynamic movements, Garret Polka (10) throws the ball to home plate. "Shortstop is the perfect position for me since I get to kind of control the speed of the game," Polka said. He was on varsity all year, despite his young age.

Baseball Ready...

Warming up for the game, Alec Moran (11) practices with his teammate. "I'll never forget when we lost 23-2 and Coach Christie screamed for what seemed like forever, but hey, they were a good team," Moran said. He always had a good time with his team, even if the outcome of the game ended unfavorably.

Perfect Pitch...

Intently watching the game, Billy Perroz (10) takes mental notes of what he has to do when he gets out there. "I like to strike people out and see their faces fall in defeat," Perroz said. He also had a close bond with the infielders since they worked together to make plays.

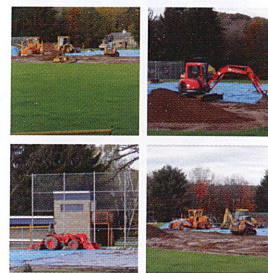

All Around...

In position to make a catch, Billy Perroz (10) waits for the ball to strike. "I miss catching since I'm not doing it this year, I am pitching instead," Perroz said. He played many different positions on the team, even batted when necessary.

WORK IN PROGRESS...

The close of the 2017 spring season brought a new infield to the baseball team. Workers ripped up, resodded, and prepared the new field for the 2018 season.

Baseball team anticipates new field

Story by: S. Ross (11)

Out with the old, and in with the new. Anxious chatter among athletes floated through the busy hallways in early October about the school's baseball field. For many players, a new field became a necessity.

"The old field needed a lot of work, and I hated to play on it because of how bad it was," William Perroz (10) said.

Having felt the same way, Zachary Morrill (10) said, "I am most excited for the removal of the dangerous dip at third base."

Still, others remained more positive.

"I didn't love the old field, but, I did like the fact that I got to play baseball on a field," Garret Polka (10) said.

No matter how they remembered the old field, the team reacted with nothing but delight when they heard the news. A few players believed the improvement enabled them to up their game.

"The new field will definitely improve not only my skills, but the whole team's skills and statistics," Perroz said.

The athletes stood more than ready to gear up for a fantastic spring season on their fresh field.

"I can't wait for it to be done," Polka said.

The team moved forward optimistically due to the new field and the other new additions, such as the fence.

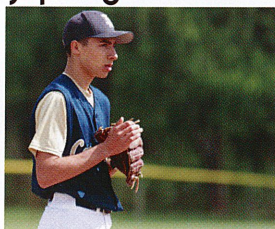

"Moving in the fence will bring more opportunities for more home runs!" Perroz said.

Do you have any pregame rituals?

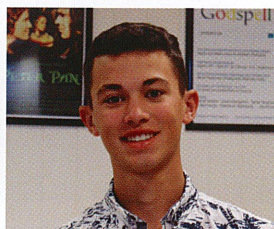

"I think about performing well as good karma."

Seniors suit up for the final time

Bittersweet feelings took over the soccer field as the girls lined up with their escorts, preceding their last game on home turf. The season of running, practicing, and dribbling quickly came to a close. The announcer called out their plans for the future and recognized them for their many years of commitment as they walked down the field.

Friends, family, teammates, and coaches continued to cheer the girls on for the duration of the last game. Seniors became a necessity to the team.

"It's very upsetting that the seniors are leaving," Emily Aller (10) said. "I think that all of the senior players on the team are great."

The girls ended their season with an impressive record of 9-7. Their hard work in the playoffs led to a successful season. The team had more to be proud of than just making the playoffs.

Senior night arrived as the last chance for the girl's soccer team to recall the special moments of the season. The girls cherished these moments in the spotlight. After a season of success and unity, they went their separate ways.

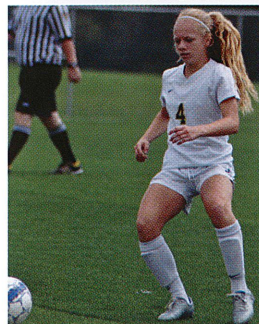

"I am definitely going to miss not being on the team next year," Alex Corna (12) said. "I've played with the other girls on the team for many years, and it just won't be the same waking up and being on the field with them at 7 AM."

Family Traditions...

To prevent her opponent from getting past, Alyssa Poleski (10) plants her foot and tries to get the ball. "My love of soccer started at home where the sport was a huge part of family bonding time," Poleski said. She followed in her brother Adam's footsteps when she began the sport at age five.

"The student section supported us and cheered us on at games."

Double Take...

Just before game time, Sidney Palla (10) stretches her hamstrings. "I love playing with my sister. We each have our own strengths. I'm better offensively, whereas she shines defensively," Palla said. Her identical twin Christa challenged her to get better each game.

Ready, Set, Score...

Cutting the ball, Nikayla Pollock (10) beats out the competition. "I get a rush of energy every time I win the ball, and it pushes me to score," Pollock said. She scored three goals during the season.

When Payton Mohney noted that he had never been featured on a soccer yearbook spread after playing four years of varsity soccer, the co-advisers and editors-in-chief decided to compile a String of Seniors in homage to the athletes that have given so much time to their sport throughout the years. We hope you enjoy the 144 pictures of senior athletes found on pages 158 - 173.

FIND THE TIME

Story by: A. Koontz (12)

for what matters most

"I am the president of Bible Club. I do not believe in religion. Rather, I believe in relationship with the Creator of the universe and my Savior. This love and passion is what I wanted to share with my peers, and I have never felt more blessed to be this active in Bible Club," Rachel Pittman (12) said.

Clubs existed to give students of all walks a chance to invest their time in what they love, while still within the walls of high school.

Madison Sieczkowski (12) said, "I really enjoy being a part of Key Club because volunteer work has always been a big part of my life.

This year, I am a secretary of the club and I like having a leadership position because I get to help keep the club organized, even if it drives me insane sometimes."

The new "CAV time" called Lunch and Learn made finding time for extras outside of the classroom more difficult. Nevertheless, the yearbook staff squeezed in drive-by meetings at the library front desk with Mr. Swanson and Mrs. Gracey just as the Social Studies Club adapted to doing one-hour fundraisers for their trip to Washington, D.C. Clubs solidified the moments in between the monotonous days of assignments and deadlines.

One More Time...

As they stand in line waiting to perform, Julianna Firek (12) and her fellow colorguard members pause to think about the upcoming few minutes. "The wind was so strong during prelims, we were looking forward to getting another shot during finals." Unfortunately, BOA cancelled Finals due to bad weather.

"My only r

City Strolling...

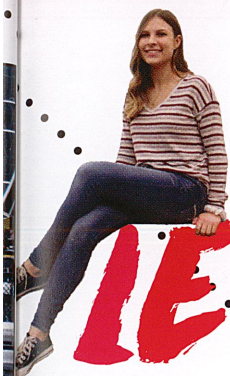

Walking through the streets of downtown Pittsburgh, regional competitors of the yearbook staff set off in search of the nearest Starbucks. "We were almost the whole way to Market Square when we realized we had lost Kelly and Mr. Swanson because of the boot on Kelly's foot. We made sure to walk slower on our way back," Angela Koontz (12) said. Three staff members won their division at the regional to compete at states.

"regret is not joining sooner." - Willy Walker (12)

LETTER FROM the editors

We first want to make sure we thank everyone who made this book possible in the first place. Every page came to fruition because of our incredible staffs and advisers.

Mrs. Gracey, thank you for giving creative guidance and providing endless ideas and new perspectives as we went about the entire creative process. Mr. Swanson, thank you for going over each page for every single spelling error, and for relenting and not making us do the entire book in Times New Roman 12 pt. with only blue and gold accents. Mr. Fantaski, thank you for all of your wisdom and guidance on the technical side of yearbook and for your honest opinions.

Design Staff, you guys turned out beautiful spread ideas, and we cannot thank you enough for all of the time you spent in Photoshop cutting out every portrait for the page number design. Literary Staff, we loved getting to read each and every one of your words that you gave to the book; the story of our year would not have been told in such detail without you. Reporting Staff, each quote you pulled from your peers allowed a moment in time to be captured forever in the pages of this book. Photography Staff, your pictures allowed the memories made to remain frozen for the rest of time; they truly make the book.

The idea for Something New, Something Bold came to light in the spring of the 2016-17 school year and developed over time. We thought we had the cover of the yearbook done about six times before we settled on the one you actually see now.

The original inspiration for this book stemmed from the artist Andy Warhol and the concept of Pop Art. As we continued to develop the theme and decide what we wanted the topic of each page to be, we realized our true inspiration came from the individuality of each student in our school. Our goal was to cover aspects of the school year that had never been covered before. We wanted every student that bought the book to pick it up and be able to find a page to which they could relate.

The creation of this book meant the world to both of us. Countless late nights spent diving into InDesign, hours of making tiny adjustments, and months of stressing over the ever-imposing deadlines were more than worth it. We hope the book you're holding in your hands means something to you because it means the world to us. There is no way to quite describe the feeling of something you imagined in your head come into reality as paper and ink. Thank you all for this opportunity.

BOLD moments

Concert Band

Evanna Haugh (11)

"Mr. Traugh is bold. He never gives up on anyone, which makes you feel like you're meant to be there and your mistakes make you grow."

Jazz Band B

Jesse Rachal (11)

"A bold moment is when one of my fellow classmates gets up and does a really nice solo."

Concert Choir

Zach Roden (9)

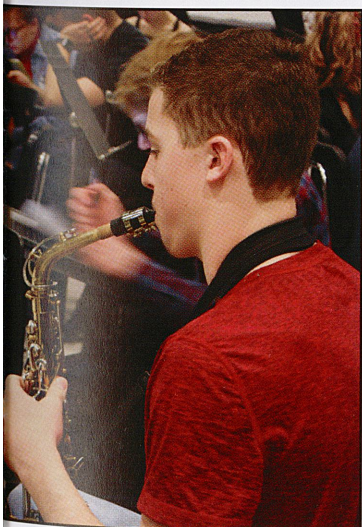

"We had not really done well in rehearsal on our processional, but then at the concert we did it perfectly."

Percussion Ensemble B

Joe Johnson (10)

"At every practice we try hard and grow as a group. We learn more and always get better."

Drums Away...

Playing the drum set, Jake Cieslinski (10) looks up to band director Mr. Heiny. "I'm playing a song called Tango Tango, and I enjoy the skill it takes to succeed in band," Cieslinski said. Cieslinski played in Jazz Band B.

Saxophone Sounds...

Playing his saxophone, Isaiah King (10) reads his piece of music. "I've played the saxophone for six years now," King said. King played in Symphonic Band in addition to Jazz Band A this year.

BOLD moments

Women's Choir

Gia Mastermonico (10)

"The most amazing thing about being in Women's Choir is when we give an extraordinary performance with the best harmonies we possibly can."

Cavalier Percussion

Jacob Riffer (10)

"This club is probably one of the best parts of my high school career. The best part was when we performed in Indianapolis and got a standing ovation after we did all five of our pieces."

Marching Band

Dylan Matcho (9)

"You have to imagine multiple aspects of the show. Bold moments are the little times at band camp when you finally nail a part of the music or a visual aspect of the show."

Red, White, and Guard?...

Standing in position, the color guard prepares for the national anthem. "This was the first football game the band could participate in the student section theme," Jenna Schindler (12) said. Schindler believed this changed the way the band appeared to her peers.

BOLD moments

Winterguard

Jenna Schindler (12)

"Once, during a WGI Regional, we were performing our show Battleheart, and our music stopped. Even though it stopped, we performed with no music, and it was a moment I'll remember forever."

Symphonic Band

Paige Lane (12)

"For the past four years, I have been first chair, which means I get a solo at every concert. I had to get over my fear in order to play the solos."

Wind Ensemble

Angeles Ondish (10)

"In band, we received a difficult piece of music. It took a lot of effort and a long time, but we worked together and made it sound great."

French Tunes...

Playing her french horn, Julianna Firek (12) concentrates on her music. "I really love band. I even considered doing band instead of color guard my senior year," Firek said. Firek has played instruments since sixth grade.

Down the Line...

Practicing for their 2017-2018 winter season, members of the winterguard hold their pose. "I really like our show this year. The floor looks really cool," Ashley Scanga (10) said. The winterguard planned to attend the Dayton Regional in the late winter.

In the Kiski Closet, Chelsea Harris (12) and Alex Corna (12) arrange the clothing items. "We stop in every once in a while to keep everything neat and make sure it's in order," Harris said. The Kiski Closet provided garments and other supplies to any student in need.

Kingly Laughter...

Sitting at a table at King's across from the high school, Sophie McDermott (12) and a member of the Kiwanis Club, Joe Miser, share a laugh. "We were having lunch to tell the members what our Key Club has been up to," McDermott said. Advisers Mrs. Gracey (fac) and Ms. Strong (fac) took a group of Key Club members to the lunch once a month.

Lead The Way...

Leading their group of freshmen down the hallway, Tret McElfresh (12) and Sara Lyons (11) take charge. "Our group's theme was Frat Boy so you know I went all out," McElfresh (12) said. Each Link Krew group chose their own theme for the workshop days in the summer.

Circle Up...

Sitting in a classroom, Jacob Myers (12) and Megan Andree (11) give advice to their group of freshmen. "It was cool to see that the incoming freshmen actually wanted to hear what we had to say," Myers said. Myers and Andree passed along their learned knowledge as they did activities with their Link Krew group.

"It was so cool to separate the freshmen into groups and break them out of their comfort zones to prepare them for high school."

Olivia Chepkevich (12)

Student Council

Kai Clayton (12)

"As the vice president, a bold moment was when the officers went to Erie for a convention. This urged us to step out of our comfort zones and speak in front of people we've never met."

Mock Trial

Kiara Coon (10)

"I made a closing argument that was so good the judge thought I was a senior."

Chess

Dylan Knowles (12)

"The day I got my very first check-mate and won definitely sticks out, especially since it took more than a few tries."

Spanish

Sydney Cipriani (12)

"A bold moment regarding Spanish club would be the one day that we flooded the atrium with festive colors, flowers, and dancing for our Salsa Dancing Day."

Holly Jolly Atrium...

As a member of Student Council, Santana Lewis (11) puts up holiday decorations. "We decorated the entire atrium from top to bottom. I didn't mind getting out of class for a day to do it," Lewis said. Student Council made a tradition of decorating a few weeks before winter break every year.

Watch Me Witness...

Taking his spot in Mrs. Valeski's classroom, Stephen Aulerich (12) sits at Mock Trial practice. "I always thought court-type things were interesting, so I joined when someone brought the club to my attention," Aulerich said. He joined Mock Trial his sophomore year.

"As president of Student Council, going from vice president to president was definitely my most memorable moment."

Ashley Grasinger (12)

Bowling

Madalynn Byers (9)

"A bold part of this club is being one of the very first people in the new club. Also, learning the proper fundamental way to bowl is cool."

WIRC

Tiffany Burkett (11)

"This club has taught me that the answer is always a car crash, apparently."

Percussion Ensemble B

Bill Nese (11)

"I love percussion because of all the bold sounds we make. Playing at the Sandy Feldstein Festival in Indianapolis, Indiana was really cool, too."

French

Meaghan Walt (10)

"I think learning about the French culture and the different ways they communicate is very cool."

In a Word...

Reading over the latest selection, Maggie Mullooly (12) and Britt Chicka (12) compare thoughts. "WIRC is different than a lot of the clubs we have. I've been in it all four years of high school," Mullooly said. Librarian and Co-Yearbook Adviser Mr. Swanson oversaw the organization.

Bowl Away...

At the bowling match against Armstrong, Jackson Carol (9) steps up to his turn. "I threw a nine. Against Armstrong, I bowled a 153, a 156, and a 165," Carol said. Carol has always liked to bowl and planned to bowl next year as well.

"At my final match of 2017, I bowled one of my best games with a score of 147."

Manus McManus (12)

"As a member of WIRC, I read a lot. This quote by Joyce Carol Oates sums up why reading is BOLD, 'Reading is the sole means by which we slip, involuntarily, often helplessly, into another's skin, another's voice, another's soul.'"

Marching band members acknowledge the passing of time

we remain

Story by: A. Koontz (12)

"I present to you the Kiski Area Marching Band and their show Echoes in Time," the announcer at each and every band competition boomed over the loud speaker. After a beat of perfect silence, the anticipation shattered with the first notes of the band's opening song.

The one-sided capes of the colorguard swung out to reveal the clock printed on the underside of their violet uniforms. Formations flowed from one set to the next, making the band of over 100 people appear as parts of one whole body.

Nothing compared to the adrenaline rush band members felt every time they left their all on the field.

"Performing with the marching band is truly your '15 minutes of fame.' Nothing else sends chills up your spine more than the echo after a cutoff, paired with the sound of the audience's roar of applause," Willy Walker (12) said.

Massive clocks rolled across the field, reminding the spectators of the show's theme.

"I love performing with the band," Dayna Daugherty (12), color guard member, said. "There's not really anything else that matches how thrilling it is," Daugherty continued.

Eventually, the show came to a close for a final time. The lessons learned remained in the minds of every member, but the show itself faded to just an Echo In Time.

Smiley Shoemaker...

Beaming at the audience before her, Haylee Shoemaker (12) prepares to take on another performance. "The thing I walk away from my senior season the most proud of is the Dayton Regional. We faced awful wind and sun, and still made finals... that ended up getting cancelled," Shoemaker said. The marching band's show recieved accolades at nearly every competition it visited.

Darcy,

We are extremely proud of the beautiful young woman you have become inside and out. We are very proud of all your accomplishments and wish you happiness and success in your future.

We love you,
Mom & Dad

Congratulations Austin!

We're so proud of you.

You've always been able to accomplish anything you've put your mind to. Keep success in your sights and reach for the stars. Life is what you make of it and the sky's the limit. Keep faith in God and your family; as you know, we'll always be there for you.

Love you always & forever,
Mom, Garrett, and Grandma

Luke,

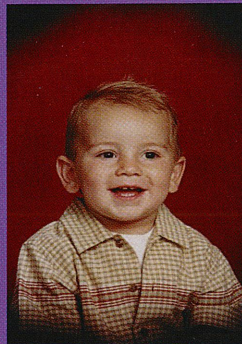

Watching you grow into the young man you have become has been a joy and a blessing. We are so very proud of you. As you embark into this wonderful new chapter of your life there are a few things we wanted you to know. The road of life is not straight; it's not even, and it's certainly not always easy. But one thing you can always be sure of is that we truly, honestly, deeply and forever love and support you. You are never alone.

Take this knowledge with you and let it warm you on cold nights and lead you out of dark places. Hold your head up, put your eyes forward and take the next step. The truth is that everybody worries about what's around the corner. Every day heroes put one foot in front of the other and just do it. You can too. The best is yet to come!

Love always,
Mom & Dad

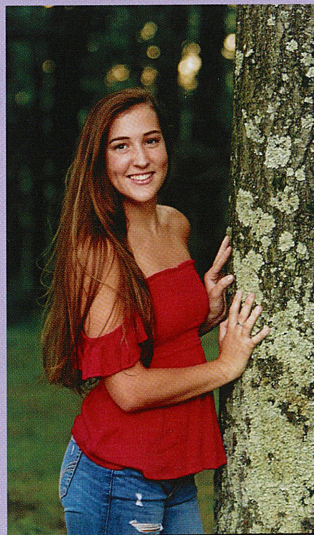

Jake,

You are an amazing blessing in our lives. The person you have grown up to be truly inspires us every day. For someone who is so incredibly strong, fearless, and determined, you are also so very kind and caring at the same time and never fail to put others before yourself. Although we cannot believe 18 years have flown by like this, we are so excited to see what your future holds and all the great things that you will do. We could not be prouder of you and all that you stand for, and although we do not say it near enough, we love you with all our hearts.

Love,
Dad, Mom, Danny, and Erica

Britt,

From the moment you arrived, you have only given us reason to hold our heads up in pride.

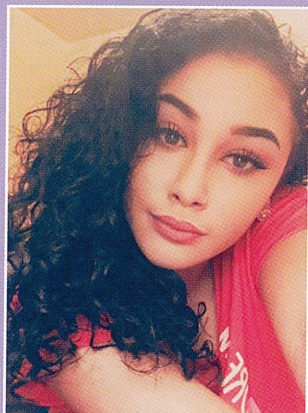

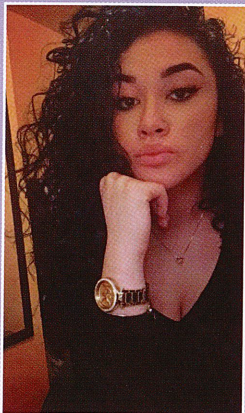

You have worked so hard to achieve your goals. Now you are on your way to seek new adventures. Our wish for you is that your dreams stay big, your worries stay small, and remember that obstacles don't have to stop you. Persevere and embrace the challenge. Most importantly, know that we love you more than anything and are here to support you along the way. We are so proud of you!

Love,
Mom, Dad and Austin

Akira Marie,

You were our greatest blessing, special from day one. You grew up to be such a beautiful young lady, so strong and independent. You set out to accomplish your life goals and were well on your way. Daddy and I are so proud of You! We admire your strength and bravery. Not a single second goes by that you're not missed. We love you so much! Our daughter, our friend, now our guardian angel.

Love,
Mom and Daddy

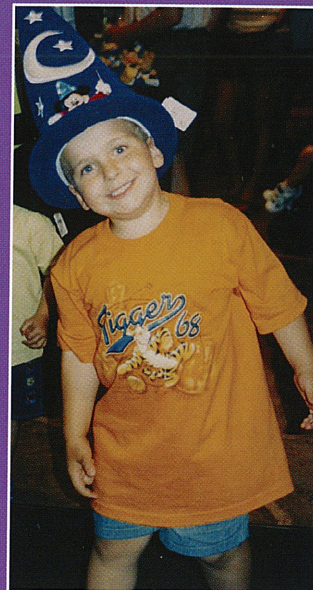

Adam,

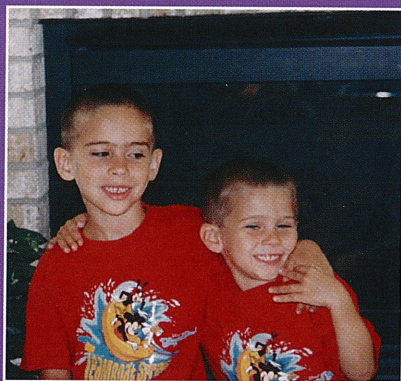

We are so infinitely proud of the young man you have become. The years since kindergarten went by so fast, but during that time you have become the most kindhearted and caring kid any parent could ask for. Your accomplishments have been many with more to come. Thank you for always working hard in every aspect of life.

May you have the confidence to move forward with your dreams. May you continue to love life, be happy and always believe in yourself.

We love you!
Mom, Dad, and Alyssa

Jacob,

We have watched you grow into a young man, and you have never ceased to amaze us. You are a wonderful son, loving brother, and make us so proud. We love you very much. Good luck and have fun in college. (Not that you need luck!)

Love,
Mom, Dad, Josh, and Julia

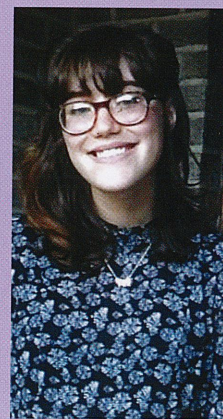

Kylie,

We are so proud of all your accomplishments and the lovely young lady that you are today. You are everything we could ever want in a daughter and more. We cannot wait to see what the future holds for you. Stay true to yourself!

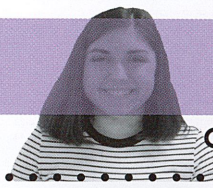

Love,
Mom and Dad

We can't believe this day is here! From the day you were born, you brought joy to us all. You have given us so many wonderful, everlasting memories. From wrestling for 8 years, playing baseball, shooting archery, and then ice hockey. Hockey being one of our favorites ... to late night practices, traveling to far off places, watching you zip across the ice, scoring and all the friendships we've gained. We loved watching you develop into the player and young man you are today. You are determined, strong, honest, athletic and a fierce competitor. A true blessing from GOD! We have many wishes for you ... to be safe, smart, cautious, wise, healthy and happy through the years!

You're an amazing son, brother, grandson, nephew, and uncle. Many treasures await you on your next chapter in life. You have all our love and support, you can come to us anytime ... we are always here for you. Press ahead with all your heart and you will achieve it!!! Son, we are very blessed and proud of you! Lots of prayers for much success!
We love you to the moon and back
Love always and forever,

Mom & Dad

Paige,

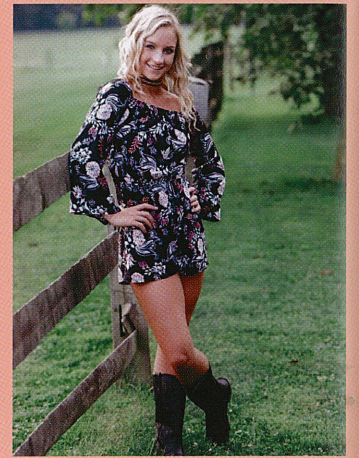

You may have come into this world earlier than expected, but you could not have picked a better day -- the first day of summer. You are as bright as the summer sun and the definition of perseverance with the way that you are able to push through any adversity that comes your way.

At a very young age your goal was to do gymnastics in college. We could not be more proud that you have successfully accomplished your goal and will be attending Bowling Green State University in the fall and will be competing on the gymnastics team. We are so proud of you and have loved watching you grow into a smart and confident woman in all aspects of your life.

We hope you find happiness and success in all that you do. We hope that you hold onto the best things that your family has given to you -- unconditional love and great memories -- and use these to guide your future endeavors. This is the beginning of your great future, which can be anything that you want. Greet this next step with anticipation. Dream big and work hard. Remember to always surround yourself with people who deserve you. Always stay humble and kind. Remember your roots and the route back home: the porch light will always be on. Remember that no matter what you do, you can always depend on our support, guidance, and friendship.

Love, Mom and Dad

Graceful,

We are so proud of the young woman that you have become. You have a heart for others and make a difference every day. We love you, believe in you, and are inspired by you. You are brave, smart, fun, strong, and truly beautiful inside and out. We can't wait to see all that God has in store for you as you begin the next phase of your journey.

Love always,
Mom, Dad, and Bekah

Brandon,

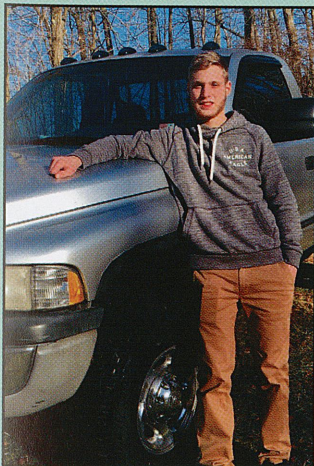

You're a handsome, intelligent, and kind young man. I'm so proud of you! As you continue life's journey, remember to treat others like you want to be treated. Trust in the Lord, in good, and especially bad. Be a gentle man and a gentleman. Be humble. Slow down a little. Keep in mind that true friendships last forever. I pray for you to use wisdom, be safe, and be shown favor. Continue to work hard to reach your goals. You are a blessing and I love you!!

Love,
Mom

Tyler,

We are so proud of you and the man you have become. We are so impressed with everything you have accomplished already! You amaze us! We are confident you will succeed in all you do. Make it happen, Cowboy!

Love,
Mom, Dad, and Cole

Hallie,

It seems like yesterday you were running down the hallway in my high heels. Now you have your very own collection.

So proud of all your accomplishments. Looking forward to seeing what you will do next.

Remember, life is like a camera ...

Focus on what's important.

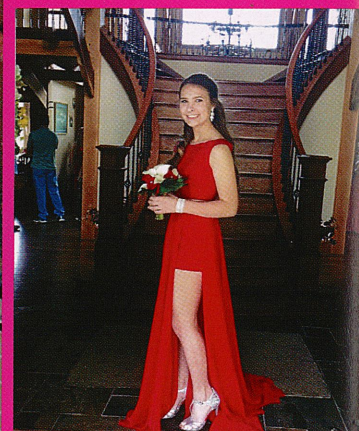

Capture the good times.

Develop from the negatives.

And if things don't work out ...

Take another shot.

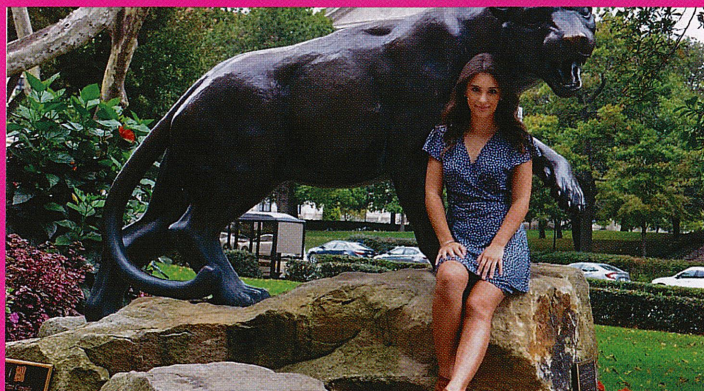

We love you!

Since the first moment we laid eyes on you 18 years ago, you have filled our lives with such joy and sunshine. As the years have quickly gone by, we've watched you grow into such an amazing young lady. You've always marched to the beat of your own drum, but did so with such kindness and compassion for others. Your hard work these last 12 years has led you well on your way to pursuing your biggest dreams, and we couldn't be more proud of you. We love you very much and hope you always choose to live a life of gratitude and joy.

YOUR DEAR PARENTS

Featuring Keaton Moorhead

Dear Keaton,

We are very proud of the young man you have become and the accomplishments you have achieved on the pitch, the court, the diamond, in the classroom, and in life. Stealing a pass and scoring the game clinching soccer goal on Senior Night, being the winning pitcher and having the walk off game winning hit in the same championship baseball game, the work in Link Krew, in Key Club, and as varsity starter as a sophomore on the tennis court are just a few achievements. You have always been so true to yourself, believing in what Keaton believes in, whether others do or not. You are the true definition of a team player and have always put your team first, playing wherever it serves the team best. Your personality and the solid choices you have made have served you well and will continue to do so at college and beyond. Your family ties and friendships run true and deep. Best of luck at Waynesburg in the classroom and on the tennis court. Know that your family is proud of where you are and what you have accomplished.

- We will always be there for you!
Love, Dad, Mom, Austin, and Ian

Gabrielle,

You are and always have been a very strong and independent young lady. You stand up for yourself, and more importantly, for others. Please continue on this path because you will accomplish great things! We love you more than words can express.

Love, Dad & Mom

Sam,

It's amazing how quickly eighteen years have gone by. You have grown into a smart, caring, loving, and beautiful young lady. We are so proud of you and all you have accomplished. You can do anything you put your mind to. Always follow your heart, believe in yourself, and all your dreams will come true. We love you very much!

Alex,

You have grown from the cute, curly haired, fireball toddler to a beautiful, confident young woman. We are so proud of what you have accomplished and become and can't wait to see where the next chapter of your life takes you! Don't ever lose that spark, and follow your dreams!
Love you!
Mom, Dad and Maddie

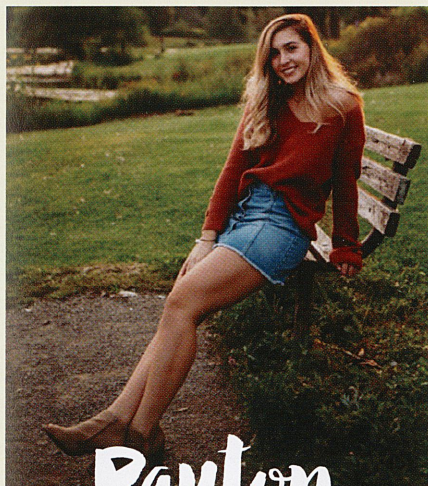

Austin,

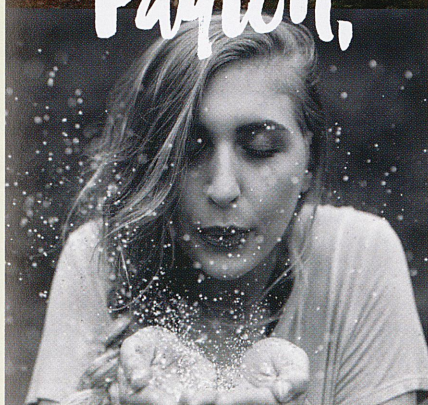

We can't believe how quickly time has passed. You have grown from that cute little boy into a handsome young man. You have a very bright and exciting future ahead of you. Have the confidence to face challenges and the wisdom to choose your battles. This is only the beginning; we wish you every adventure along the way. Stay focused, work hard, and enjoy every day. We are so very proud of you, and we wish you the best in all you do!
We love you! Mom, Dad, & Alex

Heidi,

We are so proud to call you our daughter. You have so many amazing qualities and the greatest of these are your faith and your love and your acceptance of everyone. These qualities are what make you so special. We hope you never change because we know with these traits, you will go so far. As you prepare now for the next chapter in your life, continue to find happiness in the less materialistic things in your life while embracing the finer things that come your way. Remember that what we are is God's gift to us; what we become is our gift to God. Lastly, know that no matter where your future leads, there will always be an open door waiting back home for you. We support you and love you forever and always.

Kenzie,

How has time gone by so fast? It seems like yesterday you were putting on your princess dress to go on a walk with Pap. It has been such a joy to watch you grow into the wonderful young woman you have become. Over the years you have kept us on our toes and made us laugh. We have enjoyed watching you in the musicals, on the golf course, and spending time at the fairgrounds. We cannot wait to see where life takes you and what dreams you achieve. Remember to always be humble and kind, and don't forget to sing, dance and laugh daily. Enjoy life to the fullest; it goes by in a blink. Remember most of all that you are loved, and we are very proud of you!

Love, Mom & Matt

Sadie,

My Sweet Sadie,
From the moment you entered my life, it was changed for the better. It has been an absolute joy watching you grow into a funny, outgoing, talented and BEAUTIFUL young woman. I have always been your biggest fan and I can assure you that will never change. No matter what this crazy world holds for you, I will be there to support you and cheer you on. You are amazing. I love you more than you can ever begin to imagine. Keep being the shining star that you are and don't ever change!

Love, Mom

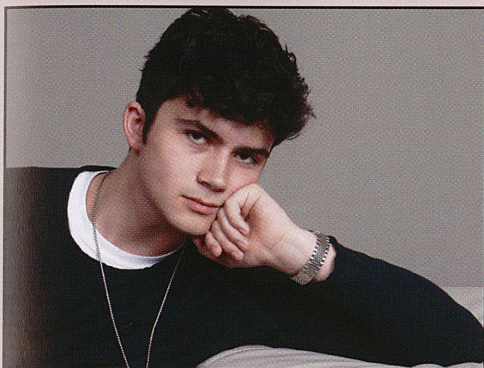

Shane!

You have been blessed with a brilliant & creative mind, relentless determination & a compassionate, grateful heart, charming wit & a clever sense of humor, amazing experiences & some really good teachers, the MOST incredible friends and a family who loves you unconditionally with ALL our hearts...you have everything you need to design a beautiful future! Remember, your destiny is created in your moments of decision...so choose wisely!

The past 18 years with YOU have been so wonderful and such a blessing to us; we've cherished every single minute. We will always be your soft place to fall, your greatest cheerleaders and celebrate life with you! Do epic things with hope, faith, and purpose!

All our love, Mom & Dad, Shilo & Lea

Erin,

We are so proud of your academic, athletic, and musical accomplishments, but we are even more proud of your kindness, caring nature, and hard work. You have achieved so much throughout your school years, and most importantly, while doing so you had fun and made wonderful memories.

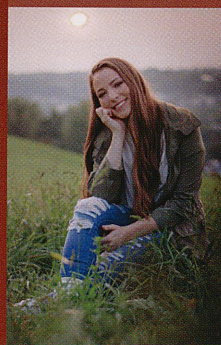

We know God has many wonderful things in store for you. Just continue working hard and doing what's right, and you will reach your dreams and goals. We will be there for you every step of the way.

Always remember these words from Walter E. Disney: "Laughter is timeless, imagination has no age, and dreams are forever."

May God continue to guide you and bless you. We love you very much!

Dear Sophie,

Here you are, ready to graduate and go out into the wonderful, amazing world. It seems like just yesterday you were catching the first fish at The First Day of Trout, swinging on the zipline at the cabin, or playing Nintendo DS with sissies between the bedroom walls. You have grown into the most unique, amazing, beautiful woman, and our lives have been blessed one hundred fold by having you in it. We are so very proud of you.

We love you always,
Mom, Dad, Gracie and Maggie

Samuel,

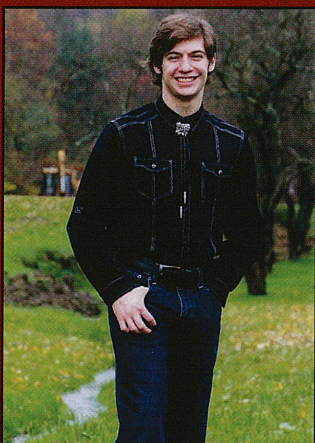

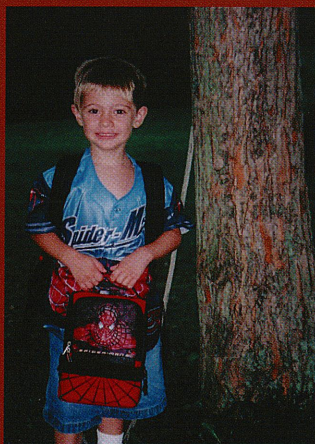

Graduating High School is a very exciting time. We are so proud of you and wish you the very best on your next journey.

Just a few reminders:

Before you act, listen;
Before you react, think;
Before you spend, earn;
Before you pray, forgive;
Before you quit, try.

You can achieve whatever you want in life. All you have to do is BELIEVE! We believe in you and know you can. Always laugh and have FUN! Stay strong and keep reaching for the stars. We love you and will always be here for you!

SENIOR SPECIALS

While considered inappropriate in some yearbook judging forums, the Campus staff feels that the Senior Specials represent a Cavalier tradition worth keeping. The staff tries to include only categories that reflect positively on the students.

Sometime in the spring semester, the staff designates a week for all seniors to vote on their favorite in a wide variety of categories.

Only the yearbook advisers have access to the ballots. The yearbook staff plays no role in the election.

To maximize the opportunity for each student to receive a Senior Special, no senior may win two categories, with the exception of the "Best Friends" categories. Should one student win two or more categories, the yearbook advisers govern the final decision on how to award each category.

SENIOR TRIBUTES

During the first week of school, each senior receives a form that defines everything parents need to know about Senior Tributes. The form details pricing, requirements for the ad, and deadlines.

The yearbook staff does its best to personalize each ad, and this takes a considerable amount of time. Furthermore, each year, the staff has only a limited amount of space for Senior Tributes. Therefore, to guarantee that individual ads will appear in the book, the staff suggests that parents submit them as soon as possible. The Campus staff reserves the right to deny Senior Tributes once the designated amount of space has become filled.

CAMPUS PRICING

Students order books during Campus Weeks, the first two full weeks after Labor Day. Students must fill out a yearbook ordering form, place it in an envelope with the appropriate payment, and drop it in the wooden collection box outside of the library.

Alternatively, students and parents can order their yearbook online at yearbookforever.com. If ordering online, students have additional options to customize their book.

After Campus Weeks, the yearbook price goes up by $5. There are two additional price raises throughout the year.

If the staff has books available at the end of the year, they will sell them on a first-come-first-serve basis.

CLIENT SATISFACTIONS

Because the yearbook represents a student conceived, planned, and produced publication, the staff cannot guarantee complete satisfaction to the purchaser. Hence, the staff will not refund money for poor portrait quality, misspelled names, incorrect grade designation in captions, etc. Books returned for refunds must not have any writing in them and cannot display any obvious damage done by the student. Once returned, the book becomes property of the staff and may be resold at the current cost.

The yearbook staff will exchange books only for certain reasons. No exchanges will transpire unless the advisers determine that the book has a major flaw such as missing or upside-down pages. All refunds and exchanges happen only at the discretion of the advisers.

Should the yearbook staff have no record of a student ordering a book, the student must produce a canceled check or online ordering receipt to demonstrate proof of purchase. No student may pick up a book for another student.

The yearbook staff and the senior photographer conduct an assembly with all prospective seniors in the spring of their junior year to distribute all pertinent information concerning senior pictures. The senior photographer offers various times for individual appointments, as well as a wide variety of packages from which to choose. While we certainly encourage it, students do not have to purchase pictures or packages from the senior photographer. However, each student must pay a sitting fee for the processing and developing of the pictures. This fee is $16. The price may increase from year-to-year due to rising costs involved.

The yearbook staff can guarantee that individual senior pictures will appear in the book only if each student schedules his/her appointment on time, arrives promptly for the shoot, and chooses which proof to appear in the book on time. No profile shots will appear in the yearbook. Additionally, the yearbook staff and the senior photographer will define all due dates and will include these in the information given out at the senior portrait assembly.

By having portraits taken by the same photographer under the same conditions, the yearbook staff can implement uniform quality for all photographs, thereby serving the best interest of the students.

Is The Guard Ready?

Standing in position, Dayna Daughtery (12) and her fellow teammates wait for instruction from their coach. "I really like our costumes and the meaning behind the show this year," Daughtery said. The SA Winterguard practiced three days a week at North Primary and performed on most Saturday nights in the spring at competitions in the area.

Story by: A. Koontz (12)

Each year builds upon moments. We went about our days like nothing changed, the same routine day in and day out. Projects done and tests taken seemed like monumental events, but the conversations had and pictures taken became what truly mattered. Months and semesters flew by, yet the tiny pieces of each day became what amounted to the year we can never get back. The monotony may have seemed rather boring, but we wouldn't pass the people in the hallway forever.

The bold choices every student made defined our year. The large, obviously extraordinary moments of band competitions and wrestling matches won held a spot in the history books, but the small choices shaped the school year. Waking up 182 times between August and June brought us here. Trudging across the bus lot or from the student spots at the back of the parking lot during the polar freeze made us actually appreciate stepping into the waiting doorway at 7:20. Guinea pig became our new title as we defined what Lunch & Learn meant to our teachers and ourselves. Hearing the bell at 2:44 never ceased to deliver the elation it did the first day of freshman year.

Together we created the 2017-2018 school year out of thin air. No one else outside these walls can say that, and that's pretty bold.

"BOLD, to me, means doing something brave that might not work. But, you still do it anyway."

THE BOOK

PHOTOGRAPHY

This book employed a Smythe type binding with 100# dull enamel paper for all 240 pages inside. The Campus staff utilized Adobe InDesign and Photoshop from its CS6 suite to create the publication. The staff utilized three font families in the book:

Dense
Manhattan Darling
Arial

On the lithocote cover, Walsworth printed the four-color design on luminaire linen with multi-level embossing. The staff created different front and back four-color endsheets.

Book Price: $65 if ordered by the end of Campus Weeks, $70 until January 3rd, and $75 afterward.

After Sales Books Price: $85.

Senior Tributes: $60 for 1/8 page and $100 for 1/4 page

Paige Duckworth - Hourglass Studio - 2 LaBelle Road - Vandergrift, PA - 15690 - 724-568-3128 - provided all senior and underclass pictures. She also shot all club group shots and sports team shots. The photography staff shot all candids using two school-owned Canon 60D cameras.
